THE ELECTIONS.

New-York Probably Republican.

THE CITY DEMOCRATIC.

A Remarkably Quiet Day in the City.

DEMONSTRATIONS IN TAMMANY.

Great Republican Triumph in Massachusetts.

Mr. BANKS ELECTED GOVERNOR.

MAJORITIES IN OTHER STATES.

The Elections yesterday passed off with very little excitement. We give below the returns, as far as they reached us up to the hour of going to press. In Massachusetts, the result is decided; in the City, there has been a Democratic majority, both for State and county officers.

In Massachusetts, the Republicans have made a great victory, electing Mr. Banks by a handsome majority, and securing a large majority in both branches of the Legislature. No particular interest attaches to the elections in other States, and the returns received are so incomplete as to arrive at any conclusion regarding the result.

[illegible] what may be the [illegible] we must hold ourselves prepared for all contingencies. According to the accounts everything had been brought to a dead [illegible] could not be paid between distant [illegible] because there were no safe means of remitting [illegible] produce ready to be converted into gold [illegible] to be forwarded to port, owing to the absence of any power of obtaining advances upon it. [illegible] that if the machinery of ordinary [illegible] could again be set in motion all would immediately be righted; but in no quarter was there [illegible] such a result. Whether on [illegible] would be found through some final convulsion, or through a slow and fluctuating convalescence, no one could predict, but it was certain that matters could not continue long in their then state. [illegible] considerations on the favorable side was the fact that the stock of specie in the New-York banks still stood at $[illegible], which is beyond the average amount, and more than £500,000 in excess of the total held at the corresponding period of the last trade crisis, when note circulation was less than at that time. The Californian arrivals of about $[illegible] each fortnight would also be relied [illegible] than a week the Vanderbilt would be due from Havre with, it was believed, [illegible] to be followed shortly by the $320,000 [illegible] from London and Liverpool. [illegible] furnishes to the financial world [illegible] of the way in which they strive [illegible] facilities and neglect those at their door. [illegible] Atlantic telegraph were in operation, what [illegible] the first messages sought? The state [illegible] for the banks on both sides. But as [illegible] the Bank of England, we have the power [illegible] information, and permit it to be kept [illegible], practically, it is useless. All the calculations of our merchants and manufacturers [illegible] with reference to the probable [illegible] of the money market, yet it is only [illegible] of seven days that they become acquainted with each return of the Bank of England on which those movements depend. Indeed, in [illegible] their own laxity, which renders it unnecessary to assert the necessity for it they [illegible] The management of the Bank during the [illegible] of seven years has been in all essential respects [illegible] and so honorable to the country [illegible] to have to enlarge upon the [illegible] of the interests and just rights of the financial community manifested on this point. [illegible] recently back, when public attention was [illegible] aroused to it, there was a belief that arrangements would be made to enable the public [illegible] to take place in the Gazette [illegible] instead of Saturday, or, at all events, that they should be publicly posted at the Bank on the morning of Wednesday. The intention, however, seems to have been allowed to drop. It is to be hoped it will exist, and that the delay in its fulfilment has been but accidental.

From the London Times, (City Article,) Oct. 20.

The minimum rate of interest and discount charged by the Bank has to-day been raised to eight per cent. The announcement of this change was not made until late in the afternoon (about 4½ o'clock,) and it is consequently presumed that the advance has been occasioned by the increased requests for specie for shipment to the United States and Canada. It was well understood that some large operations of that character were very probable; the exchange with the United States, the enormously high rate of interest, and the low prices of staple commodities, caused by the disorganization of commerce there prevailing, necessarily held out inducements for the extensive shipment of bullion thither. This advance in the rate is designed to meet the exigency, and to check the export of specie. It cannot for a moment be supposed that it will be successful, whilst the rate of interest remains so enormously high in the United States as at present. What is 8 or 10 per cent. here in comparison with 24 to 36 per cent. there? It is entirely absurd to suppose that the addition of an 8 per cent. to the value of money here can affect the specie movement. If the 6 or 7 per cent. less profit is the pocket of those who ship gold thither, and so much more profit to the Bank [illegible] This check to the export of bullion will be felt on the other side of the Atlantic by the rate of interest and discount falling so as to make it a matter for consideration whether the risk of sending gold be covered by the profit. Unless the Bank is prepared to take further steps to raise the value in all the more important countries of the world, it cannot be expected that gold will flow into the vaults of the Institution. In the meanwhile, the pursuit of this [illegible] involves our commercial community in difficulty and embarrassment. It may be [illegible] that every advance in the value of money increases the difficulty in procuring it. The paper of the same mercantile firms that would be discountable to almost any extent with money at 5 per cent. becomes scarcely negotiable at 6 per cent.; the inevitable result is a contraction of trade, and a depreciation in the value of commodities to such an extent as to render it almost a miracle that any firm can bear up against it. The professed power of the currency system of the present day lies in this very thing. It reduces the price of commodities in this country to such an extent as to cause the influx of gold for their purchase. That is the theory. The practical effect of the working of that theory was exemplified in 1847. There has been no inflation of credit antecedent to the present pressure as in that year. It must be assumed, therefore, that it has been occasioned by the enlarged demands of legitimate commerce. The question then arises, must we check the growth of our commerce, by even so called the needful expedient for keeping it on and one which [illegible] its growth? It is quite palpable that neither individually nor nationally can we [illegible] any bounds to our commerce beyond the natural and acknowledged limit—the means of remuneration at a profit. By making money dearer and dear at present, commerce is [illegible] a crushing process, which no advantage [illegible] the chance of an extra million or two of Bank vaults can compensate, assuming [illegible] carried far enough to be effectual. But can be the nature of the excuse now [illegible] it is evident that a further rise of two or three per cent. would not divert a single sovereign or a single ounce of gold into the Bank vaults or check its export. It is purely a question of profit and security, and just now the gain is too large to be resisted, although a latent doubt may exist as to the unimpeachableness of some of the securities offered. The conclusion we must come to after a review of the circumstances is, that the rate will be kept as high as will have remained at 5½ or 6 per cent. so far as the effect of imposing a check upon the exportation of gold to the United States is concerned, whilst it would undoubtedly have been greatly to the advantage of the mercantile world that it should have been so. But no; the provisions of the Bank Charter Act point out the so-called remedy, viz., the commencement of the country is to be strangled and crushed until the current of the precious metals changes in our favor. Whether this will be accomplished with less disaster and misery than in 1847 is the question to be solved. That there is no excuse for a panic, not justification for a commercial crisis at present, must be admitted on all hands. How cruel and impolitic, then, must be the system which renders such results not only possible but too probable.

From the London Times, (City article,) Oct. 20.

The Bank of England to-day raised the minimum rate of discount from 7 per cent., at which it was fixed on Monday last, to 8 per cent. It is scarcely necessary to remark that this movement, which raises the value of money to a height unknown since the Autumn of 1847, has excited considerable sensation in all commercial and monetary circles. To say that the step was unexpected would scarcely be correct, since it has been apprehended ever since Monday last, and the extremely adverse character of the American news published this morning at once impressed many persons with a conviction that a rise to 8 per cent. could not be much longer delayed. Still, the fact that the greater part of the day passed without any announcement from the Bank, had induced an impression that the alteration would at least be deferred until to-morrow, for it was not until between 4 and 5 o'clock that the notification was made. The calmness with which it has been received contrasts most satisfactorily with the agitation witnessed a few days ago, when the public mind was less familiarized with the real scope of the monetary movements in progress abroad. The new measure of the Bank is generally regarded as a considerable extent, precautionary and protective. From the transactions coming under their notice, the directors were doubtless convinced that preparations were in progress for immediately transmitting large quantities of gold to America; and, considering that the drain upon the Bank continued without intermission all last week, they had no alternative but to adopt a fresh measure of restriction. It is quite clear that up to the latest date there were no signs whatever of a subsidence of the panic in the American markets. So long as the exchange is thus unexceptionably depressed and the pressure for capital in America so excessive, it is probable that no measures which the monetary institutions of Europe can adopt will prevent the efflux of specie from this side; the utmost they can do will be to render the movement more moderate. It is expected that shipments of specie to a large amount will be made from Liverpool to New-York this week.

From the London Saturday Review.

The returns of the Bank of England—although they justify the adoption of strong measures to meet the drain which the position of America is calculated to produce—contain nothing to excite alarm. At this season of the year, there is always an increase in the notes in the hands of the public, and a consequent decrease in the Bank reserve. The fluctuation generally commences a week or two before the payment of dividends, immediately after which the lowest point is reached, and in ordinary years the disturbance is substantially over by the end of October. Thus, in 1856, the notes in the hands of the public rose from £19,789,000 on the 20th of September to £21,155,000 on the 18th of October; and at the same time the reserve fell from £6,813,000 down to £3,080,000. The changes which are now going on are in a great measure, though not entirely, traceable to the same periodic cause. The reserve has fallen a shade more rapidly than usual, and some further reduction may be expected in the next returns, but before any evil augury can be drawn from these figures, due allowance must be made for the temporary reduction which invariably occurs at this period of the year. The autumn panic of 1847 was almost entirely produced by the neglect of the public to appreciate the real meaning of the depression in the Bank reserve. Between the beginning of October in that fatal year and the 23d of the month, the reserve had fallen from nearly four millions to little more than one; and although the Bank Directors were aware that this did not indicate any real diminution of their resources, the public became alarmed, and began to distrust the Bank's power to afford accommodation at the very moment when the returns, if properly read, proved that the tide had turned, and that easier times were coming. It was to relieve this unfounded alarm that the letter of dispensation was sent to the Directors, and the fact that it never became necessary to act upon it, both justified the step and showed how groundless was the panic which had previously prevailed. So far as can be discovered at present, the true position of the Bank, and the real import of the weekly returns, are so much better understood now than they were ten years ago, that there is little reason to fear a recurrence of the frantic terror which was almost universal at this time of year in 1847.

Considering the extent of our commercial transactions with America and that the present crisis has come upon us when our Indian troubles were beginning to weigh down the money market, it will be a ground for satisfaction if we succeed—as there is every reason to hope that we shall do—in getting through the difficulty, though at the inconvenient cost of having discounts for a few weeks at seven or even eight per cent. While money is in eager demand all over the Continent, and credit has almost ceased to exist across the Atlantic, we cannot expect to retain the stock that is necessary for our commerce, except by keeping up its price; and any considerable improvement in the market is hardly to be looked for until the news arrives of the abatement of the panic, and the restoration of confidence in the United States. Unfortunately, the vicious system in banking which has compelled so many establishments to suspend specie payments must have shaken the very foundations of credit too roughly to allow of a very speedy return to a wholesome feeling; and, however we may be disposed to groan under the pressure of hard times, it is no small relief to reflect that we have not placed our reliance on institutions so unstable as those which have proved in America unable to stand against the railway panic, exaggerated as it has been by an unprincipled press. But it may be confidently predicted that the first indication of an improvement in the American markets will give substantial relief to our own commerce, and in no event need we apprehend the aggravation of the pressure which unreasoning fears have on former occasions produced. It is a very common and a very idle complaint against our currency legislation that, though it guards us against actual exhaustion, it fails at times to prevent the recurrence of seasons of panic. The truth is that no law can of itself hinder men from indulging in needless alarm. The only real remedy for evils of this description is to be looked for in the increase of intelligence. And on comparing the present time with the last great crisis of 1847, it is impossible not to observe a very marked advance in this respect. Every unexpected rise in the rate of interest—and there have been many since the peace—has been thoroughly comprehended; and though present difficulties must induce a reasonable caution, we are confident that they will not be aggravated by imaginary fears, and that our merchants will be able steadily and calmly to face and surmount whatever inconvenience they may suffer from the reaction of American troubles on our more stable commercial system.

EFFECT OF THE PANIC ON THE MANUFACTURING TOWNS.

From the London Times, Aug. 20.

The trade reports from the manufacturing towns for the past week are much less unsatisfactory than might have been expected. It must be assumed, however, that throughout the remainder of the year the amount of our exports will be considerably reduced by the cessation of the American demand. Of course, the various houses on this side desire to say as little as possible of their losses; but hitherto the actual mischief seems not to have been of dangerous extent, the steady conduct of our principal firms having kept them in a position to meet any temporary inconvenience. At Manchester the failures, although numerous, have been entirely limited to secondary establishments, and the large suspensions at Glasgow are believed chiefly to have comprised houses long notorious for trading beyond their means. At Birmingham it is said no severe injury has, thus far, been inflicted, while from Leeds we have the remarkable statement that £1,000 would cover all the liabilities that have yet arisen in connection with the New-York disasters. It can scarcely be hoped that these instances of immunity will continue, and there is little doubt that the aggregate of debts due to England from failed houses in New-York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore is enormous, although from the manner in which they are spread, and the stability of those upon whom they have fallen, the public in a majority of cases will probably be spared a knowledge of them.

From the Birmingham Journal.

The reports received this week in reference to the trade of the town generally are not nearly so satisfactory as could be wished. For the last ten days the factors' orders have been extremely small, and in many instances the hands are kept on full time, merely working up such as were in the manufacturers' books, than from any orders that were lately given out. The talk of these lately received are from the agricultural districts. In the manufacturing towns business is reported to be remarkably dull—the retail shopkeepers are doing very little business—which, of course, reacts upon the manufacturing trades of this town. In London trade is even more languid than it is in the provinces, and accounts are very difficult to get in; from that quarter orders here are also small, neither does there appear any immediate prospect of improvement in that branch of the home trade. As regards the country, we are disposed to take a more cheerful view of commercial concerns; the disastrous accounts in reference to mercantile affairs from America, the announcements of serious failures, and rumors of others at home, coupled with the rapid advance in the rate of discount, and the still increasing tightness in the money market, has excited a feeling of more than ordinary caution on the part of the public; hence the losses to which we have referred. But irrespective of this, there are various indications that the commerce of this country is on a sound and healthy basis, and that, as there has been no speculation of any kind, the circumstances operating unfavorably will be felt less than they otherwise might be.

The accounts from the United States this week are in no respect more favorable. Matters have now gone too far for this, and we very greatly doubt whether the regular course of American trade will revive before next Spring. There have not now been any remittances to the town, except in small amounts, for several weeks; but beyond the instance or two referred to in last week's article we have not heard that any of the numerous failures which have occurred have affected directly any of the merchants of this town.

From the Manchester Guardian.

We have to report an abatement to-day of the gloomy feeling which pervaded the market on Tuesday. This proceeds from there having occurred, in the meantime, fewer disasters than had been apprehended, from the imports of gold having been heavy, and from the rate of interest having undergone no further advance. People begin to reflect, too, on the soundness and safety which we enjoy, in comparison with America, through that wise principle in our system of currency, which secures the convertibility of bank notes; they have much confidence, therefore, that this country will escape any wide-spread mischief, and they have also less fear of local disasters than they had three days ago. But all classes of buyers have shut up their order-books. The restriction of monetary facilities and the cautiousness which is inspired by dangers like the present, have combined to reduce the business of this week to a smaller amount that we have had in the same length of time for many years back. Yet, with all this, and with yesterday's Liverpool sales down to 1,000 bags, spinners cannot buy American cotton at a greater reduction than 1-16d.@⅛ ₰ lb. from the rates of this day week. Such firmness arises, of course, from the extreme lowness of the supply in this country, and the little that is likely to reach us for some time. This being the case, and taking the views they do of the existing crisis, while they themselves are well sold, spinners are not pressing to effect further sales, but are waiting the course of events without acknowledging any greater weakness in prices than such as usually attends a diminished activity in ordinary times. Manufacturers are less favorably situated. Stocks are growing in their hands, and they are not so firm in their prices as spinners are. But there is, indeed, no test applied to any prices just now, and we can speak of them only in the vaguest way. There is one view which is calculated to give special uneasiness to mill-owners. The demand for their products must be curtailed for a time by the state of things in the East and the West, and they cannot accumulate stocks without relaxing their hold of prices; but no weakness here is likely to affect the raw material in the same way, if they go on using the full quantity. Exhaustion of stock in Liverpool, however, bids fair to enforce a measure which perhaps nothing else can. There has been a meeting to-day of the creditors of HUGH FERGUSON, of Rook-street, at the office of Mr. BLAIR, solicitor. Mr. ASPDEN, accountant, read a statement showing the liabilities to amount to about £41,000, and the assets to about £24,000. No composition was proposed. The assets, however, appeared likely to be soon realized, and the meeting was adjourned.

From the Leeds Intelligencer.

Trade continues dull, and the extremely mild weather has increased the difficulty of effecting sales in heavy goods. In the hall markets transactions have taken place at a slight reduction; and, without some inducement, merchants are not disposed to operate. In the shipping trade considerable anxiety is manifested with regard to American prospects, and orders for that market, which are usually given out about this time, have been postponed. The suspension of a large Canadian house is announced, with liabilities variously estimated at £150,000 to £200,000, a small portion of which is due here.

SUSPENSIONS.

The suspension has been announced of Messrs. WHAN, M'LEAN & Co., of Glasgow, and of Hamilton, Canada. The Glasgow papers mention the resignation of the manager of the Western Bank of Scotland.

The suspension was announced on the 20th ult., of Messrs. AULD & BUCHANAN, of Glasgow, merchants and shippers. Their liabilities, which are estimated at £100,000, are believed to be chiefly local.

IMPORTATION OF SPECIE FROM AUSTRALIA.

The Liverpool and Australian Navigation Company's steam clipper Royal Charter, TAYLOR, Commander, arrived at Liverpool on Saturday, Oct. 17, from Melbourne, after a rapid passage, with dates to the 14th of August, and 84,000 ounces of gold ane 24,000 sovereigns in specie on freight. She had also an extensive and valuable cargo, consisting of 279 bales of wool, 1,352 skins, 64 hhds. of hides, 137 packages of tallow, 2 bales of horsehair, 96 packages of British goods, 1 package of woodwork, and 13,625 bags of copper ore.

The £360,000 brought by the Royal Charter from Australia was delivered in London on Monday morning.

The Avon and the Heatherbell sailed from Melbourne on the 10th of August for England; the former with 51,000 oz. of gold, and the latter with 20,000 oz. The latter had arrived.

The West India Mail Steamer Magdalena, arrived in England, brought £170,000, of which £75,000 is gold and the remainder silver.

EXPORTATION OF SPECIE TO INDIA.

From the London Times.

The precise amount of specie to be taken out on the 20th by the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Indus is £778,768, of which £712,684 is for India, £62,754 for China and the Straits, and £3,330 for Aden. The greater portion of this sum is silver, the gold being about £38,000, principally for India.

THE LATEST LONDON MONEY MARKET.

From the London Times, (City Article,) Oct. 21.

The course of exchange at New-York on London for bills at 60 days' sight is variously quoted at from par up to 105 per cent., the latter being for first-class paper only. There is, consequently, at present an advantage in sending gold from this country as compared with drawing bills from America.

The public continue to support the funds by investing largely, and there has been a recovery to-day of a half per cent. Consols for money, which left off yesterday at 88, were first quoted 88⅝@⅞. For some time they remained with an unsettled appearance, but ultimately the numerous purchases exercised a strong influence, and an advance took place to 88⅞, which was fairly supported to the close, the last official transactions being at 88⅞@⅞ for money, and 88⅞ for the 10th of November. After regular hours the disposition to firmness was maintained, and the quotation for the account was 88⅞@⅞. In the early part of the day the rate for loans on Government securities was 5½ ₰ cent., but in the afternoon large sums were obtainable with ease at 5 ₰ cent. At the Bank the applications were comparatively moderate, and in the discount market choice paper was negotiated slightly below the Bank minimum of 8 ₰ cent. Bank Stock left off at 212@214; Reduced, 87½@⅞; New three ₰ cents., 87½@⅞; India Stock, 207@210; and India Bonds, 30s.@20s. discount. The increase in the Bank rate has led to some sales of Exchequer-bills, and the price has receded to 15s.@10s. discount.

The foreign stock-market has been quiet, with a tendency to advance. In Turkish there was a recovery of about 1½ ₰ cent. A transaction was marked in Swedish, but, notwithstanding the announcement of the new loan, it showed no alteration from the previous rate. Brazilian Five ₰ Cents. were negotiated at 98⅞; Danish Three ₰ Cents., 84; Mexican, 19½; Peruvian Four-and-a Half ₰ Cents., for the account, 77; Russian Five ₰ Cents., 106; Spanish, for the account, 40⅞; Swedish, 83; Turkish Six ₰ Cents., for the account, 87½, ¼ and ⅜; ditto, Four ₰ Cents. Guar. [illegible]; for the account, 97⅞; Dutch [illegible] Half ₰ Cents., 63⅞; and the Four ₰ Cent. certificates, 97⅞.

In the foreign exchanges a good deal of doing for Paris was reported the last post, the only other important alteration was a considerable advance in the cases of Leghorn and Trieste.

About £68,000 of American gold was sold at the Bank to-day. It is said that about 40,000 sovereigns brought by the late arrivals have also been paid in there.

An impression has prevailed in some quarters that the Arago, which sails from Southampton for New-York to-morrow, would take out about £200,000 in gold. Up to this evening the total engaged to be sent was 4,600 sovereigns. It is understood, however, that a further parcel will be dispatched from London early to-morrow morning.

IRELAND.

From the Dublin Correspondent of the London Times.

According to the generally correct authority of the trade report of the Freeman's Journal, commercial matters here are on a perfectly firm and sound basis, and, except the severity of the high rate of interest, there is no pressure of any kind. There is not any urgency for discounts, and the banks appear to be acting pretty liberally towards their customers. Two bankruptcies appear in the last Dublin Gazette, one a country one, reported to be rather heavy, and the other a Dublin one, of minor consequence. As a whole, the traders never passed through what has been a trying year with surer credit and less disaster. High prices, high interest, diminished consumption and general dullness have now ruled for many months.

THE AMERICAN BANKING SYSTEM.

From the London Times, (City Article,) Oct. 19.

In the thick of its evils there will be little profit in moralizing on the American panic. One piece of instruction, however, should be noticed while it is fresh. Apart from the incurables of the Birmingham school, there has long been a set of currency theorists who, while recognizing the doctrine of convertibility, have opposed the Bank Charter Act on the ground that where this doctrine is enforced no restrictions are necessary to guard against redundant issues. According to their view, the idea of providing by law for a contraction of the note circulation in proportion as bullion is withdrawn from the country is simply absurd, since the public, who are the best judges of their own wants, will perform that operation for themselves. They will take, it is argued, as much bullion as they need, and this can be procured only by sending in notes for payment. The fact that it is possible for the banks to delay making provision for these demands until the exigency is such as to cause a panic and a consequent rush for the purposes of hoarding—in the face of which no Bank can sustain itself—is always lost sight of. But we have now, in the case of the Philadelphia and Baltimore banks, and even in that of the New-York and Boston establishments, although the latter have thus far escaped from final disaster, a perfect illustration of the insufficiency of the mere theory of convertibility to secure the advantages claimed for it. The note circulation of all these banks was payable on demand to bearer. A foreign drain had been going on for some time, and its rapid increase was imminent. But while their notes were being sent in for gold, they perseveringly re-issued them in the shape of discounts or advances on bonds and stock. Of course, the dogma that with a convertible currency it is impossible to maintain an over-issue, proved true, but the demonstration was not attained until too late. In proportion as they persisted in abstaining from a contraction of their circulation, thus preventing a fall in prices that would have checked the importations of foreign goods, that circulation came back upon them with increased rapidity, and it was not until they found their stock of specie becoming exhausted that they resorted to measures of self-preservation. The work of contraction then fell upon the public with a sudden shock. Alarm became universal. Houses that in the absence of warning of any approaching restriction of accommodation had relied upon obtaining the usual advances went down one after another, heavily in debt to the banks that had misled them; the general credit of the banks was thus assailed, noteholders rushed for specie, not because they wanted it, but from fear that in another hour they might not get it, and forthwith came an announcement of suspension. This, at least, was the case at Baltimore and Philadelphia. At New-York and Boston the position had been rather less unsound, and the securities held by the banks and their general system of administration were of a better character. But here, although the banks saved themselves, the mercantile sufferings were no less deadly. Indeed, it may be questioned if, owing to the sacrifices consequent upon the protracted struggle of the banks, after the domestic run had commenced, to prevent their own stoppage at any cost to their customers, the private losses at these places will not in the end prove to have been the most severe. In either instance the lesson is alike conclusive, and can hardly fail to convert that section of the opponents of our currency laws who profess to be guided by any tangible principle. Upon the class who fancy it is in the power of Governments or banks to enable people to pay debts by simply promising to pay them it is needless to seek to operate. Although England at the present moment presents in the midst of the Indian mutiny and her American losses an example of financial steadiness to the whole world, there is probably not one of these persons but would be prepared with the monotonous pertinacity peculiar to their state to prove, in any number of letters, pamphlets, or parliamentary examinations, that the charge now exacted by the Bank of England for money is simply the penalty of a perverse neglect of some infallible and self-evident nostrum that would enable us to secure at any moment a "sufficient" and never-failing supply at the agreeable rate of 3 per cent.

FRANCE.

ADVANCE IN DISCOUNT—GOLD QUOTATIONS—THE BOURSE.

From the London Times, (City article,) Aug. 21.

The Bank of France have to-day raised their rate of discount from 6½ ₰ cent., at which it was fixed on the 13th inst., to 7½ ₰ cent. Although a rate so high has not previously been experienced in France, the limit until the recent modification of the charter of the Bank, having been 6 ₰ cent., the movement does not appear to have created any additional uneasiness on the Bourse.

The quotation of gold at Paris is about 5 ₰ mille premium, and the short exchange on London is 25.22½ ₰ £1 sterling. On comparing these rates with the English Mint price of £3 17s. 10½d. ₰ ounce for standard gold, it appears that gold is nearly 3-10ths ₰ cent. dearer in Paris than in London.

The final quotation of the French Three ₰ Cents on the Paris Bourse, on the 20th ult., was 66f. 70c. for both money and account, showing a decline of only an eighth.

TRADE IN FRANCE.

Paris (Oct. 19) Correspondence of the Times.

I alluded last week to the difficulty experienced by the mercantile and manufacturing classes of Paris in obtaining cash payments. The resolution come to by the Directors of the Bank of France to raise the discount on commercial paper from 6½ to 6½ per cent. has not improved their position. They have accepted the measure, however, without much complaint, preferring, no doubt, a comparatively high price for accommodation rather than that the period for discountable bills should be shortened. The retail trade has improved during the past week. A considerable number of Parisians, and of foreigners who habitually reside here, have returned to town for the Winter, and the demand for warm clothing, of which the necessity is gradually making itself felt, has grown brisk. The "dead season" has lasted longer than usual.

The Lyons and St. Etienne manufacturers congratulate themselves on having received so few orders from the United States this year, as they have thus escaped the consequences of the commercial crisis which has occasioned so much injury in the chief towns of the Union. The last advices from New-York announce that French silks were selling in that city at from 25 to 30 per cent. under the manufacturers' prices at Lyons and St. Etienne, consequently the shopkeepers do not intend to send orders to France until some improvement shall take place.

Large orders were received in the course of last week by the manufacturers of fancy articles (articles de Paris) from St. Petersburg and other towns of Russia. Similar orders, it is confidently hoped, will be received to a greater extent, as the modifications lately introduced into the Customs' tariff of that country will multiply the commercial transactions between Paris and St. Petersburg.

DEPRESSION IN THE SILK MARKET.

According to the circular of M. ARLES DUFOUR of Lyons, the advices from the United States have greatly aggravated the depression in the silk market, owing to the belief that the consumption on that side must be small for many months. Opinions are greatly divided as to the future course of prices, some persons anticipating a further heavy fall, while others [illegible] to the extent of that which has already [illegible] to rely upon a reaction.

THE HARVEST IN FRANCE.

From the Paris Correspondent of the London Times.

The consequences of an abundant harvest are now indeed felt throughout France. The price of bread has fallen to 14 sous the 4lb. loaf in Paris, and to 12 sous in several of the departments; and these are, I believe, the ordinary prices in plentiful years. There was no further fall in the corn market last week. Prices are firm, but without any appearance of a serious rise. The offers of wheat for sale were less numerous at the last Paris market. The farmers resisted a further reduction, and prices remained nearly the same as during the previous weeks, namely, 24f. the 120 kilogrammes for wheat of the first quality, and from 23f. to 23f. for other descriptions. In the markets of the central departments quotations were lower, but were firm or higher in the East, and in Alsace, where purchases were made on account of Prussia. The shipments of corn for Spain have contributed to keep up prices at Marseilles. Hard African wheat has risen there from 34f. the measure of 100 litres to 35f. 50c. It appears that on Saturday last the market at Arras was not overstocked, and that prices remained firm, without variation from the previous week. Seed wheat sold at 22f. the hectolitre. At Chartres much business was doing in wheat at a rise of 1f. the hectolitre; at Dijon it was firm at 23f. 50c. and 24f. the 100 kilogrammes, and flour at 44f. the sack of 125 kilogrammes. The market at Montereau was brisk, with an advance on wheat of 50c. the hectolitre. The Paris flour market was more active last week than for several weeks previous; prices were maintained at from 42f. to 55f. the sack of 157 kilogrammes. The factors declared 4,680 sacks for delivery within 30 days at these prices. In consequence of the firmness of the market, flour for bakers' use was more demanded than offered.

AUSTRIA.

FAVORABLE ADVANCE IN DISCOUNT—IMPROVEMENT ON 'CHANGE.

Vienna (Oct. 17) Correspondence of the London Times.

In two or three days it will be officially made known to the public that no more railroad shares will be brought into the market until the beginning of the year 1859, and it is tolerably certain that if the communication had been made a fortnight or three weeks ago the crisis would have been far less severe here. The creditors of BOSKOVITZ & Co. have not yet accepted the proposal of the Credit Bank to advance a million of florins on the assets of the bankrupts, because that institution wishes to make conditions which are considered "unreasonable." The Credit Bank is the principal creditor of the firm of BOSKOVITZ, and it wishes to make the other creditors pay for the accommodation which it is willing to afford them by obtaining full security for its own claims. This in other countries would probably be considered fair enough, but Austrian men of business are prone to indulge in false sentiment, and to expect that others should do more for them than they would do for others. During the present crisis the moneyed world has continually looked to the Finance Department for assistance, and it does not seem to feel that the ceaseless interference of Government is its bane. When the Credit Bank and the new railroad Companies were established, Baron BRUCK interfered in their affairs in a way which in fortunately totally unknown in England. Persons of his recommendation were made members of the different Boards, this or that firm had a certain amount of shares at par because he wished that it should be so, and the Credit Bank was obliged to invest much more of its capital in new railroad shares than it was inclined to do. The moral pressure exercised was at last so unbearable that the Board of the Credit Bank lost patience, and positively declared that it would not take shares in the Carinthian Railroad to the amount of 15,000,000 florins, which the Minister of Finance was endeavoring to force it to do. It is now seriously considered whether the Austrian Bank should not raise the rate of discount, as it has been observed that foreign houses borrow money here at 5 per cent., instead of obtaining it at home at 7 per cent. The measure would probably have been taken long ago had it not been feared that it might increase the embarrassment of the mercantile men and manufacturers, many of whom are in a very tottering state.

There was a marked improvement on 'Change to-day.

HAMBURG.

FURTHER ADVANCE IN DISCOUNT.

The London Times, in its city article of Oct. 19, states that at Hamburg the rate of discount had advanced to 9½ per cent.

By advices from Hamburg the price of gold is 42⅝ per mark, and the short exchange on London is 13.4½ per £1 sterling. Standard gold at the English Mint price is therefore at about the same price in London and Hamburg.

Hamburg (Oct 17) Correspondence of London News.

The pressure on our money market, which had already shown itself last week, became much more stringent when the telegraph brought the intelligence of the Bank of England having made a further advance in their rate of discount, and even for the most unobjectionable paper it has been quite impossible to obtain cash on lower terms than 8 per cent. per annum, while many, who to meet their engagements would readily have given 10 per cent. for good but not select bills, found that they could not get them converted into money on any terms, and the consequence has been that heavy sacrifices of goods of various kinds have been freely made to meet the exigencies of the hour. At Bremen the tightness has, if possible, been still more severe, for as the direct intercourse between that city and the United States is comparatively greater than that which is carried on between America and this city, they have been in addition exposed to many adverse circumstances from the monetary and commercial disorganization in the chief cities of the Union which has latterly prevailed. Both here and there, however, the evil has been increased by the almost simultaneous announcement, from official authority, that the punctual payment of the call on the Russian railways, which falls due in December, would be rigorously enforced; and as, from the financial connexion of Messrs. STIEGLITZ with Hamburg, and with Germany generally, a considerable portion of these shares is held here both by private parties and by public companies, this intimation has come upon them at a very inconvenient time, and may yet lead to much mischief.

ITALY.

Letters from Milan announce the suspension of the respectable banking firm of BALABIO & Co., of that city. It had been in difficulties for some time.

Wreck of American Vessels.

LOSS OF THE "RICHARD ANDERSON," AND NARROW ESCAPE OF THE CREW.

From the London Times.

SOUTHAMPTON, Saturday, Oct. 17.

By the arrival at this port to-day of the Captain and crew (16 in all) we learn the particulars of the loss of the Richard Anderson, Capt. C. E. COFFIN, and the narrow escape of all on board. The Richard Anderson was a full ship, and left Rotterdam for Baltimore on the 29th of August last. On the 23d of September, when in lat. 41° 9' N., lon. 38° 12' W., it was found that the vessel had sprung a leak forward, and several hands were immediately put to the pumps. The water continued to increase for several days, notwithstanding the pumps were kept going continually day and night, and the crew get quite worn out. On the morning of the 27th moderate breezes set in from the southwest, which increased during the afternoon and evening to a hurricane, and at 8 P. M. the main topsail was blown away. At 9½ P. M. the ship heeled over suddenly, and on going below it was found that the lower hold was half full of water and the cargo afloat, the ship at this time lying on her beam-ends. The main spanker was hauled up and the forward sails set to try to get the ship off before the wind, but they could not get any canvas to stand the hurricane. At 10½ P. M. the mizzenmast was cut away. At this time the hurricane was at its height, and the ship still lying on her beam-ends, so that no one could get along the decks. The ship rolled heavily, and the pumps were kept going, but with very little effect, the crew being nearly exhausted from their continued labors. The hurricane moderated as the night advanced, and the morning of the 28th opened with fresh gales and squalls, the ship still lying on her beam-ends. The pumps were getting useless, and the crew continued bailing water out of the quarter-hatch with buckets, but could not get much out on account of the cargo floating all about in the hold. This was continued during the day, and the morning of the 29th opened with fresh gales and squally, the ship still lying on her beam-ends, [illegible] of the quarter-hatch with buckets, but could not get much out on account of the cargo being all afloat in the hold. The [illegible] continued during the day, and at 2 P. M. the gale abated, but the vessel still made more water, and was settling down very fast. At 6 P. M. the longboat was got ready for launching. At 8 the ship [illegible] and carried away the long-boat and stove a second boat, thus leaving them with only one boat. The ship was rolling very heavily, so [illegible] they had to cut away the foremast, (the only one left standing,) to ease her. At midnight, the weather being somewhat moderate, the last boat was got ready for launching, as the ship was still settling down. At 2 A. M. [illegible] with the boat was got ready, and the second mate and one man placed in her, but in launching her she got half full of water, and in passing her round the stern of the ship she swamped, and the mate was lost; the other man was rescued, and the boat righted. In this perilous condition they remained till the following afternoon, when a sail was seen on the starboard bow at 4 o'clock. They hoisted a signal of distress, and as it was getting dark, [illegible] light, and burned a tar-barrel. At 7 P. M. they came within hailing distance, when the crew of the Richard Anderson took to their boat and went alongside the vessel, which proved to be the Voile de Pressup, from the Banks of Newfoundland. They were taken on board, and the sinking ship abandoned, her state that time leading to the expectation of her capsizing and going down in very short time. They left [illegible] in latitude 41° 31'. On the 2d of October they fell in with the bark Sir Edward Parry, of and for London, which took them on board, and on the [illegible] transferred them to the Charlotte [illegible] Weymouth, where they were landed at 5 P. M. Thence they came on to this place by rail this morning, and made application to Mr. THOMSON, the American Consul. The Captain and crew intend returns to America by the Arago steamer on Wednesday, and the crew will [illegible] opportunity. The Sir Edward Parry is a South Sea whaler, and comes home, we are informed, with 300 tons of oil on board, after being out three years and a half.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE LOSS OF THE "WARDEN"—CAPTAIN'S STATEMENT—NAMES OF THE LOST AND SAVED.

From the London Times.

We briefly stated in the Times a few days ago that a melancholy shipwreck by which seven lives were lost, had occurred at Scunton Sands, off Hartlepool. The Captain was among those saved, and from his statement some further particulars of the fatal disaster have been ascertained. It appears that the vessel, which was called the Warden, was an American bark; Mr. MOSHER, an intelligent man, being the commander. On Thursday afternoon she left the Mumbles, laden with tons of railway iron, previously shipped at Newport for Cuba. She set sail with a fair wind, and at 10 o'clock a squall came on which induced the crew to furl the top-gallant sails; the jib was also carried away. They then made Lundy Light and kept it in view until 11 o'clock. The weather then began to thicken and rain, the wind N. and N.W.; vessel close hauled on a starboard tack; sighted land about 12 o'clock, which was supposed to be Hartland-Point, about three miles off; then hauled the mainsail up, and were the ship round on the port tack, closed reefed topsails and courses, ship heading N.N.E., wind blowing in violent gusts, rain and hail falling heavily in little. Continued on [illegible] over and 5,867 fatherless children were relieved. The whole number of persons in the families was 15,[illegible].

The Wamsutta Mills, in New-Bedford, recently running five days in the week, have discharged 250 hands within a few days, retaining 250, whose wages are to be reduced, but with a corresponding reduction in the rents of tenement houses thereto [illegible].

The closing of the cotton factories at Augusta, Ga., deprives about 500 persons of employment.

The lack of business is affecting the railroads at the East. Expenses have been reduced by running slower trains and fewer, making short time in the machine-shops, and discharging a portion of the hands.

The Boston Journal says: "A machinist, who has been doing an extensive and profitable business, informed us the day before the crisis he reduced the number of his hands, by discharging all who were unmarried, retaining all who had families dependent upon them for support. With these he hoped to weather the crisis. But he has been compelled to contract still further, not because he did not work, but on account of the impossibility of making collections. He has, consequently, discharged nearly all of his hands, retaining only enough to do the small jobs which come in from regular customers."

Fifty laborers were taken into employment at the Philadelphia Navy Yard on Monday, preparatory to the commencement of work on the new sloop-of-war.

The "Sons of Malta," in Philadelphia, have contributed $500 for the relief of the poor. The Philadelphia baker who pledged himself to give away 500 loaves of bread to the poor every Saturday, began the distribution last week. Benevolent citizens have subscribed him to dispense aid more freely, at their expense, so that the number of loaves given away weekly at this establishment will be 1,500. The citizens of the Twenty-fourth Ward of the same city have contributed $2,000 for relief purposes.

The merchants and business men of Keokuk, Iowa, held a meeting last week for the purpose of taking into consideration the means necessary to remove the produce of the country.

The Board of Trade at Davenport, Iowa, have made a proposition to forward the agricultural produce of the West to the Eastern cities, in payment of the debts by their merchants. The merchants there have large amounts in the hands of their bankers, but in the entire absence of Exchange with the East, they cannot be turned to account.

Governor WICKLIFFE, of Louisiana, has made a visit of a week in New-Orleans to examine the causes of the financial pressure, especially as regards the Banks.

Three hundred men are out of work in Derby, Conn., in consequence of the stoppage of factories.

The majority of the factories and shops still running in Hartford, Conn., have adopted the three-quarter day system. Manufacturers generally succeed in making their payments by selling goods at reduced rates.

The cheap provision movement in Philadelphia is getting on. Circulars are to be sent to farmers and graziers, requesting information of wholesale prices and cost of transportation. An address to the citizens of Philadelphia is also in preparation, setting forth the necessity of concerted action.

NEW-YORK CITY.

An Appeal to the Country.

To Farmers, Mechanics, Housekeepers and others, who need labor, in the State of New-York and elsewhere.

NEW-YORK, November, 1857.

Owing to the present severe pecuniary pressure, great numbers of persons in this City, who have been thrown out of employment, are willing to go into any part of the country where occupation can be obtained. As their desire is to earn their subsistence the coming Winter, rather than suffer, or be dependent on charity, they would engage for low wages. Among them are persons of almost every age and variety of pursuit. Children of both sexes, young men and women, those with and without families, steady mechanics, reliable laborers, and many sewing women and girls, who would turn their hands to any work for which they might be competent. The persons referred to, mostly belong to the respectable industrious classes. They have hitherto been self-supporting, and by causes beyond their control, and now reduced to the necessity of subsistening on alms, or o finding employment out of this over-crowded City. Nobly preferring the latter, they ask a home or temporary asylum in any accessible part of the country where they may earn their daily bread until the present calamitous times are overpast.

The persons in question having no means for traveling, these must be supplied by those who require their labor. The cost of the best and cheapest route from the City of New-York to any desired place may be easily ascertained, and the proper sum being sent to the Society applied to, the order will recieve immediate attention.

Persons requiring labor will please direct their orders as follows:

For Children of both sexes.

To A. C. PEARCE, Juvenile Asylum, No. 23 West Thirteenth-street, New-York.

For Girls and Women.

To Home of the Friendless, Thirtieth-street, New-York.

For Children and Young Women.

To C. L. BRACE, Children's Aid Society, Astor-place New-York.

For Children, Young Men and Women, Mechanics and Laborers.

To L. M. PEARL, "Five Points House of Industry," New-York.

To M. MEAD, "Five Points Mission," New-York.

This Circular appeal is the result of a conference with the above-named Societies, and the Association which the undersigned represents. It is earnestly hoped that the hearts of many may be moved to give it an early and favorable response, and thus afford some little relief to the poor, and to this over burdened City. As stern Winter will soon again be upon us, whatever may be done for the benefit of the destitute in this way must be done quickly.

Papers in the interior, friendly to the object, will please republish this Circular.

R. M. HARTLEY, Secretary

Of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, No. 39 Bible-House, Astor-place, New-York.

Naval.

No changes have yet been made in the Brooklyn Navy Yard; the number of men employed being about 1,100, in all departments. The commission appointed to survey the frigate Susquehanna have performed that duty, and will immediately report to the Department. What their decision will be is not known, but the carpenters who bored her timbers, in conversation in the yard, assert that she is as sound as a nut, so far as her timbers, below water line, are concerned; and her upper works are said to be as sound as the Savannah's, before she was stripped. The impression (and the prayer) is that the report will be in favor of hauling her out, and altering her into a sloop-of-war. If this is done it will furnish employment to several hundred mechanics for a year to come. She will probably be taken upon the same ways in the ship house where the Niagara was built.

The old ways in ship house No. 2 are very much decayed, and are to be taken away, and replaced by new ones at once. The work upon the Savannah, in dock, is rapidly progressing. When completed she will be as good as new.

Captain BERRYMAN, lately returned in the Arctic from the survey of the proposed submarine telegraph route between Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, has resumed the charge of the Vixen, which has thoroughly overhauled and repaired.

The Arctic will be hauled up for the Winter.

The Brooklyn City sewer, which has its outlet through the Navy Yard flat, is completed, with the exception of making the connection at the foot of the avenue. The other two sewers are in an advanced state, which are to connect one with the barracks, and the other to drain Washington-avenue. Some controversy between the Government and the City of Brooklyn temporarily delays their completion. The filling for the barracks is about finished; but the work of raising the plot to a level with Flushing-avenue will require two or three weeks longer. Several high sand hills, south of Myrtle-avenue, have been wholly dug away to supply the material to fill up this large flat. The barracks will be commenced in the Spring. About an acre and a half have been filled up near the Clinton-avenue Dock, mostly with sand dredged from the channel in the vicinity of the Dry Dock. Large quantities of stone are being hauled there with which to build the quay wall. It is most from the North River, from Connecticut, Massachusetts and Maine. Every block of it will be handsomely dressed before being fitted to its place.

Captain W. S. MURRAY, formerly of the Marine Barrack, Brooklyn, N. Y., has been ordered to the command of the Marine Barrack, Pensacola, Florida.

First Lieutenant J. C. GRESNOR, United States Marine Corps, has been ordered to the command of the Brooklyn Marine Barrack, in the absence of Lieut. Colonel JOHN HARRIS. He reported for duty on the 31st of October.

The new United States steamer Shawsheen, built at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, is shortly expected at the Brooklyn Navy Yard to be fitted out for California, whither she goes in the service of the Lighthouse Department. Commander JOHN DE CAMP has been detached for that service, and will go out in charge of her, to superintend the lights upon the coast of California. Her machinery was built in New-York.

Board of Governors.

The Board of Governors met at the Rotunda on Monday, the President, G. CONRADT GUERNSEY, Esq., in the chair.

INTERMITTING TO MEDICAL MEN.

The Medical Staff at Bellevue Hospital having authorized Mr. REGNAS, a carpenter, to erect certain cabinets for the pathological museum to the value of about $287,

Governor SAYRE moved that Mr. Rogers be paid, and that the commission be reimbursed from the fees received from pupils.

Governor FINCKNEY objected upon principle. It would establish a bad precedent. The Medical Board had overstepped their position.

Governor SAYRE said that the Board of Medical Men were perhaps conscious of the value of their services, and possibly might, occasionally and pardonably presume.

Governor TIEMANN did not think the medical men were doing so gratuitous a work. They had a direct interest in the formation of a medical school. They acted from interested motives.

Governor SAYRE hoped the last speaker would not at this late day deny that any information obtained either by practitioners or students at that hospital or school was divided broadcast through the whole area of society.

Governor TOWNSEND enumerated and eulogized the gentlemen at the head of the medical department. None were more distinguished as citizens or as disinterested philanthropists. He was sure Governor TIEMANN would not assail such men as Drs. Mott and Francis, nor even their younger associates.

Governor TIEMANN explained. He objected to this, namely, that these men merely went and examined what younger men and students were doing, not directing them what they ought to do. Besides, the Medical Board had uniformly treated this Board with contempt. It was a school for experiments.

Governor SMITH said that it was important to inform the world that Governor TIEMANN was infinitely wrong—that no one either was allowed to prescribe, or did prescribe, who had not been examined and passed as a competent physician.

Governor DUNNO said, "Aye, but ten to one he never saw a sick person till he came there."

The President deprecated further discussion, but if proceeded, Governor B. F. FINCKNEY ironically expressing a wish that the Board would instantly give up the Hospital to the sole direction of the "Doctors," who he asserted had now practically entire control.

Governor TIEMANN said the students paid each $5 for his diploma, same sterling as certificate of attendance on lectures; and that the medical men from that accumulation could easily pay Mr. Rogers. But it was uncertain whether, after a student had attended, he would think it worth his while to spend $5 on such a document. Therefore, the medical men ought to insist on payment previously to allowing admission.

The President stated that not one in five thought proper to take out such certificate.

After long discussion and various resolutions and amendments, it was moved to refer the matter to the Committee on the Hospital, with power to pay, which motion was lost, five in the negative against four.

A resolution was then unanimously adopted that such student shall pay $5 for his military ticket, and that his certificate of attendance shall be given him gratuitously at the termination of the course.

THE EXQUIRIOR.

It was resolved that the President and Secretary draw their requisition on the Comptroller of the City of New-York to issue his warrant, payable to the President's order, for the sum of $25,000, to be paid out of the appropriation for the Almshouse Department for 1857.

THE PENITENTIARY.

The additional wing at the Penitentiary became the subject of renewed discussion.

Governor B. F. FINCKNEY alluded to attacks on him; he moved a resolution, the object of which was "that proposals for bids be advertised for furnishing material (except stone) and for erecting the new wing; the contractor to specify what amount per day will be allowed for such masons and bricklayers as shall be furnished by the department."

Governors DUNNO and SAYRE were strongly opposed to the erection of any building, especially public buildings, by contract.

Governor TOWNSEND had some experience. When a man wished a substantial building for his own use, he did not ordinarily employ a contractor.

Governor FINCKNEY defended contract work. The Board had availed themselves of it occasionally.

Governor J. W. FINCKNEY spoke on the same side as his namesake.

Eventually the matter was referred to the Committee on Penitentiary to report.

The Board then adjourned to Tuesday week.

CITY TAXES.—The receipts at the Tax Receiver's office up to Saturday a week ago, as previously reported in the TIMES, were $1,536,635 28. For last week the sums received were as follows:

Monday	$101,826 00
Tuesday	89,866 30
Wednesday	99,123 27
Thursday	119,969 97
Friday	165,302 29
Saturday	136,337 85
Week's Receipts	$671,964 78
Previously reported	1,536,635 28
Total	$2,208,600 06

The total receipts for 49 days are about $700,000 behind the receipts for the corresponding number of days last year. At the commencement of next month an addition of one per cent. will be charged on all sums paid after that date. Towards the end of the month there will doubtless be a rush of tax-payers to avoid the one per cent. extra.

Coroners' Inquests.

THE HOMICIDE OF HENRY DODD.—The Coroner's inquest in this case was brought to a close on Monday. No further evidence was taken, but Coroner CORNEY charged the Jury at some length, after which they rendered the following verdict: "That deceased came to his death by a blow inflicted by one of the officers of the Buena Vista Guard, alias 'The Forty Thieves,' at present to us unknown."

SINGULAR DEATH.—Coroner Gamble held an inquest on Monday, on the body of Mrs. Mary Magian, an Irish woman who lived in Forty-first-street. The evidence showed that the deceased, while sitting on a chair—she being intoxicated at the time—fell suddenly to the floor, when her head fell into a basin of water in such a way as to strangle her to cause death. She was left by her husband sitting on the chair, and on his return was found with her face in the water as described and life extinct. A verdict was rendered in accordance with the facts stated.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH.—An inquest was held on Monday by Coroner CORNEY at No. 289 Grand-street, on the body of Charles Halsey, a boy 3 years of age, who was burned to death from his clothes taking fire from a stove. The mother of the child was at work on the floor below, leaving the boy in a room alone. On her return she found her child burned to death. A verdict was rendered of accidental death.

DROWNED WHILE INTOXICATED.—Coroner HILLS held an inquest on Monday on the body of Peter Sinnott, a laborer, whose body was found yesterday morning in the water foot of Gouverneur-street, East River. The deceased was last seen alive on the evening of the 23d ult., and was then intoxicated and on the pier at the foot of which his body was found. The Jury believed that he fell into the water while thus intoxicated, and rendered a verdict to that effect. Deceased was 48 years old, and leaves a wife and three children residing at No. 612 Water-street.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH.—Coroner HILLS held an inquest yesterday at No. 424 Seventh-avenue upon the body of a child, two years of age, named JAMES MCGARRY. The child while alone fell upon a stove, when his clothes caught fire, from which he was so severely burned that he died. A verdict was rendered accordingly.

FATAL FALL.—WM. ALEXANDER, a gas fitter, yesterday afternoon fell from the third story of building No. 89 Third-avenue, and was instantly killed. The body was taken to the Nineteenth Ward Station-house, and an inquest will be held by the Coroner to-day.

[illegible]

A Mr. LOUIS MERCHANT, of the firm of EMERSON, has been arrested on a charge of swindling to the extent of $14,000. In March last Mr. Merchant sold of the value named, from various wholesale houses in New-York, representing himself as of the firm of E. P. WILKINS & Co., of Minneapolis, Minnesota. Being really connected with that firm, he was able to induce them fully to believe the statement, and also that he was individually possessed of $17,000 worth of stock in the St. Louis Gas Company. Among others, the firm of HAYDEN & HOPKINS, clothiers, No. 29 PARK-ROW, were taken in for $2,149 22. For this sum EMERSON gave them three promissory notes, signed "Mess. E. P. WILKINS & Co." He then started West, with his booty, and actually did dispose of a large share of it to the firm in Minneapolis, as well as of the remainder to a firm in Dubuque. But in process of time the New-York creditors heard of each other's claims in manner largely with DANIEL EMERSON, and the members of them thus accosted excited their alarm. Mr. HAYDEN started West for information, and has actually secured the books of the St. Louis Gas Company. Reluctantly confessed that the effective name of Darwin Emerson was not in all cases taken. After further satisfactory information, he returned to New-York, and Judge CARDOZO issued the writ in hand, and arrested the culprit in St. Louis on Sept. 10. After considerable time it was ascertained that Emerson resided on Fourteenth, near Ninth-avenue. This house was constantly watched. It was finally so surrounded that Emerson's escape by egress was impossible. Mrs. Emerson said that her husband was not in. The whole house was searched and he was not found; when at length, according to the lower tale, a key was observed in the street door of a closet beneath the stairs. Mrs. Emerson instantly went out and took it out, and refused to give it up. A locksmith was called, who finally forced open the door, and it was opened. Called inside the lowest stair, in the remotest corner, crouched the quaking form of DANIEL EMERSON. The miser was plunged into an agony of grief. The wretched husband and father at length [illegible] formed, hale and vigorous man. He was taken from his family and elegantly furnished home, and at 3 P. M. was on the Erie and Mississippi railroad, in company with Mr. MANNING and ex-Policeman JOE. FAGG DE JOHLEY, bound for New-York City. Prior to the arrest the requisition of the Governor of the State of New-York had been answered by the Executive of Missouri, on whose warrant EMERSON was arrested. Mrs. EMERSON states that her husband was in the city on the morning of her call at the Metropolitan Hotel, and left on the next morning from apprehension caused by the name of "Mr. CARDOZO."

EMERSON arrived in this City, on Saturday, in charge of officers, and is now in the Tombs. His examination is set down for Saturday next. Mr. JOHN C. HANFORD made the necessary affidavits against him.

$70,000 COUNTERFEITS.

The developments in the trial of the forgery cases in Boston, in which PRICE, COWEN and others are concerned, are quite remarkable. Some startling disclosures of crime have been made. EDWARD E. PRICE was arrested in Boston last week on a complaint that he had in his possession ten forged and counterfeit bank bills. An accomplice, GEORGE R. CONRAD, turned State's evidence. He testified that he saw PRICE with an unsigned bill on the Woonsocket Falls Bank, bill one on the Suffolk Bank of $500; he has also had bills on the Brighton Market Bank, Langdon Bank, Dover, N. H., Shoe and Leather Dealers' Bank, Mechanics' Bank, Providence, and some others; some of these were signed and some were not; those that were signed were forgeries. Witness identified a $500 forged bill on the Blackstone Bank, a $500 bill on the Suffolk Bank, and a $500 bill on the Shoe and Leather Dealers' Bank, as having once been in the possession of PRICE—the two last were not signed.

Another accomplice, JACOB STARCH, stated that a lot of counterfeits were destroyed by PRICE and himself to the amount of sixty or seventy thousand dollars. He had himself passed counterfeit $400 and $300 bills at Portland, Me. The $70,000 of forged bills were on the Hide and Leather Dealers' Bank of Boston. Both COWEN and PRICE counterfeited the signatures of the bills which were passed. On this testimony PRICE was bound over for trial, in default of $10,000 bail; COWEN was held in $500 as a witness.

MORE COUNTERFEITS.

An important arrest of passers of counterfeit money was made in Philadelphia on the 21st inst. The bad bills were 3s on the Farmers' Bank of New-Jersey at Mount Holly. The guilty parties are JACOB BENSON, THOS. REGNERSACK and SAMUEL HART. A large number of counterfeit bills were found upon them.

A DAYLIGHT ROBBERY.

A bold daylight robbery was committed in Chelsea, Mass., last week, in the jewelry store of EDWARD A. SERRAY. At 11½ o'clock in the morning, the store was entered by two men, who knocked down the clerk, a young man named SUTHERLAND, stole $700 worth of goods and decamped. SUTHERLAND was dangerously wounded in the head. The City Council of Chelsea offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest of the robbers. One BALDESSUAL, alias "Spunky," has been arrested on suspicion. SUTHERLAND was still alive on Saturday.

HOUSEHOLD DEATH IN MASSACHUSETTS.

On the highway from Brighton to Old Cambridge, Mass., last week, a gang of six ruffians set upon three drovers returning from market at Brighton, and attempted to rob them. A severe fight ensued, and finally the attacked party sought safety in flight, and escaped. The drovers were badly beaten, but saved their money.

COUNTERFEITING BY PHOTOGRAPHY.

Two young men, of respectable character, have been arrested in Cincinnati on a charge of counterfeiting bank-bills by photography. They are brothers, JOHN W. and HENRY M. DIGGINS, who have a Photographic Gallery in Fourth-street. The bills were on the Northern Bank of Kentucky. The Chillicothe Bank of Ohio, and nicely executed.

FEMALE BURGLARS.

Two young women, ADELIA WOOD, aged 18, and SARAH JANE LAZOSKE, aged 15, are in jail in Putnam County, N. Y., for committing a burglary. They have pleaded guilty to breaking into the house of Mr. HOLDEN, in Gold Spring, while the family were away at camp-meeting, and stealing property to the value of $50.

A PAUPER SEDUCED BY A PEORIOUS KEEPER.

One TUCKER, the keeper of the Clinton County Poorhouse, in this state, has been arrested for the seduction of a pauper in the institution. The victim is enceinte. TUCKER has a wife and children. The Plattsburg Republican says the female was last week taken before a magistrate, and testified that TUCKER had kicked, struck and bruised her in a shocking manner, with the view of producing an abortion.

More Murders.

Mrs. DANIEL MCLAIN is under arrest in Eldred, McKean County, Penn., on a charge of murdering her husband. On Sunday week, some men who had been in MCLAIN's company on the previous day, called to see him; the woman said he had gone out, but a hand was seen protruding from under the bed, and blood was on the floor and on Mrs. MCLAIN's dress. The body of MCLAIN was then found, with the head cut to pieces, apparently with an axe. One blow across the back of his neck had nearly severed his head from his body. A sharp axe was found in the yard, covered with blood and hair. The attack was probably made while MCLAIN was asleep on the bed, as the sheets were found pulled away in the wash tub, covered with blood, and badly cut with the axe. It appears that MCLAIN and his wife were in the habit of quarreling; and the morning of the murder MCLAIN was seen chasing his wife with the broom from the house into the field. It is supposed that on her return she found him asleep, when upon she seized the axe and committed the horrible deed.

A constable named BENJ. STARR was killed at Honeoye Falls, N. Y., on Monday, by a young man, MARLY LOCKE, whom he was trying to prevent from fighting. LOCKE stabbed him, and fled, but was caught.

A bloody encounter occurred in New-Orleans on the 26th ult. between Lieut. HUNT, of the First District Police, and one JOHNSON, late a special Policeman. There was a quarrel between them; they met and fired at each other with pistols till all the charges were exhausted, and then JOHNSON stabbed HUNT twice with the blade of a sword-cane. JOHNSON has a ball in his abdomen, and is supposed to be mortally wounded. HUNT is pretty badly hurt.

Miscellaneous Items.

The Ordnance Department, having reported that there is a sufficient number of the new model rifle-musket—calibre ⅝-inch bore—on hand to arm five regiments, and that the arsenals will manufacture enough for at least one regiment per month, these arms, with the necessary accoutrements and ammunition, will be issued to companies and regiments in Kansas, Florida, West of Arkansas, Texas, Department of the Pacific, Upper Missouri, Department of Utah, including Fort Laramie and Kearney, New-Mexico, Minnesota, and posts on the Atlantic and Baton Rouge, as specified in "General Orders, No. 12," recently issued by General Scott.

The Liberia packet M. C. Stevens is ready to sail from Baltimore. She will take out a number of emigrants from Kentucky and Virginia for Liberia. The number from Kentucky is not yet known, but from Virginia there will be those of Mr. Dupries, 66; those of Mr. Sterns, 22; and those of Miss Melinda Craig, 14. There will probably be 150 from Kentucky. Rev. Mr. Cowan, Secretary of the Kentucky Colonization Society, goes out in the packet to examine the condition of the vessel. Rev. Francis Burns and Rev. Samuel Williams go out in connection with the mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Three slaves belonging to Gen. Geo. R. Smith of Georgetown, Mo., were run off on the 23d by a young man named Henry W. Spencer, who claimed to be from Pennsylvania, on his way to Kansas, and had been enjoying the hospitality of Gen. Smith.

Four deaths have resulted from the explosion of the tug Swanton Wise at Buffalo. John FRASER, Captain; WM. STARRIT, Pilot; SYLVESTER JOHNSON and IRVING HAIGHT.

The Peru Mining Company, of Illinois, have struck a third vein of coal, at the depth of 345 feet from the surface.

THE BOUNTY-LAND BUSINESS.—The condition of the bounty-land business under the acts of 1847, 1850, 1855 and 1856 is full of general interest. Under the act of 1847 there accrued to the 30th ultimo 28,715 warrants, covering 13,130,720 acres, of which 70,000 acres were located. Under the act of 1850, 156,944 warrants were issued, covering 15,194,400 acres, of which 164,226 acres were located. Under the act of 1852, 11,979 warrants were issued, covering 1,198,500 acres, of which, 9,666 acres were located. Under the act of 1855, 214,694 warrants were issued, covering 29,710,670 acres, of which 117,868 acres were located. This gives official issue up to the 30th ult., under all the acts, of 502,082 warrants, covering 53,689,670 acres.

FROM NEW-MEXICO.—Mr. OTERO, delegate to Congress from New-Mexico, arrived at St. Louis a few days ago on his way to Washington. He reports meeting Governor BENDITA near Walnut Creek, on his way to New-Mexico to assume the duties of his office. The Indians on the Plains were quiet.

THROWN FROM AN OMNIBUS.—Last evening a driver on one of the Bowery and Grand-street omnibuses was thrown from his seat to the pavement and considerably bruised. His omnibus ran against the end of a piece of timber, corner Beekman-street and Park-row, and the jar threw him from his seat. He was placed inside the omnibus and sent to his residence.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

[illegible] Elections yesterday in New-York, Massachusetts, New-Jersey, and other States, passed off [illegible]. The result in this State we are not yet [illegible] to ascertain. In Massachusetts, the Republicans have had everything their own way. In New-Jersey, a new Legislature was elected, but [illegible], and the Telegraph does not inform us of the result. The returns from other States are equally incomplete.

The City appears to have gone Democratic by a majority on the State ticket of nearly 12,000, so far as we learn from. We have full returns from eighteen of the twenty-two Wards, showing the following vote for Secretary of State:

Tucker, Democrat	29,134
Clapp, Republican	11,149
Fleming, American	5,900

This leaves a plurality for TUCKER of 17,985 over CLAPP, and a clean majority over all of 11,385. The four Wards to be heard from are the Eleventh, Twelfth, Seventeenth and Nineteenth. The Eleventh and Seventeenth, being old Democratic strongholds, the vote rom them will considerably increase TUCKER'S vote. The majority in this City for the Democratic State Ticket will probably be 20,000.

The result in Massachusetts is a clear Republican triumph. The returns reached us up to midnight from 146 towns. Mr. BANKS is certainly elected Governor by a large plurality, and there is a large Republican majority in both branches of the Legislature. The following is the vote for Governor as far as received:

Banks, Republican	38,610
Gardner, American	26,839
Couch, Democrat	20,763

The plurality for Banks, 11,971. The Massachusetts House stands as follows: 65 Republicans, [illegible] Americans, 16 Democrats. In the Senate there is a clear Republican majority.

By the arrival at this port, yesterday morning, of the steamship Arago, we receive four days' later intelligence from Europe. London dates are to the 21st of October. The Bank of England had again raised its rate of discount from 7 per cent., adopted on the 12th of October, to 8 per cent. The step was taken solely in consequence of the American crisis, and to prevent the exportation of specie. Simultaneously with the Bank of France's rate of discount, from 6½ to 7½ per cent., had also taken place, and in Hamburg the discount was as high as 9½ per cent. There had been an improvement in the Vienna money market. The effect of the American panic is felt severely in the manufacturing towns of England, but, on the whole, it is believed that the great bulk of the merchants will be able to brave out the great losses they will be compelled to sustain. There is no political news from Europe by this arrival. The American ship Richard Anderson, from Rotterdam to Baltimore, was abandoned at sea on the 29th of September, waterlogged and disabled. The second mate, JOHN ALDRIDGE, was drowned. We give elsewhere an account of the wreck, together with further particulars of the loss of the Boston ship Wardan.

It is stated by the Washington Correspondent of the Baltimore Sun that Governor WALKER has asked and obtained leave of absence from Kansas to visit his family in Washington. He will thus be on the spot to answer any complaints that the Administration may have to make against him.

The yellow fever is said to be raging very fatally at Jacksonville, Fla., there having been fifty deaths since the 1st of October. In consequence the streets of the town were deserted, the Court had adjourned, and a day of fasting and prayer had been observed. The latest accounts, however, report a sudden abatement in the disease. It has also broken out at Milton, Florida, and several deaths have occurred. At Williston, S. C., there have likewise been a few cases.

The General Produce Markets, yesterday, exhibited no remarkably new features. Flour was freely dealt in, and prices fluctuated very little. With large receipts and sales of Wheat, the tendency was in favor of buyers. Corn was plentier and more sought after, at, however, easier rates. The movements in Cotton were rather heavier, and quotations were somewhat more regular,—including Middling Uplands, at 12½c. cash, 13 b. Provisions and Groceries were in limited demand at about former figures. The freight business was moderately active.

The telegraph apparatus and other property of the Police Department, will be removed to-day from the Deputy Superintendent's office, No. 86 Franklin-street, to the building hereafter to be occupied by the Police Commissioners at the corner of Broome and Elm-streets.

Rev. H. H. GARRETT was installed last evening as Pastor of the Presbyterian Church, (colored,) in Prince-street.

The new and elegant edifice of the New-York Historical Society on Second Avenue and Tenth-street was inaugurated last night with interesting and appropriate ceremonies. The President, Hon. LUTHER BRADISH, occupied the chair. Addresses were made by GEORGE BANCROFT, and Revs. Drs. ADAMS AND BETHUNE.

The trial of FREDERICK CUEVA for the murder of OSCAR DE GRANVAL, which has been going on in the Hudson County Court, before Judge OGDEN, for the last eight days, was concluded last night. The Jury brought in a verdict of manslaughter. They were absent only two and a-half hours. The prisoner will be sentenced on Wednesday of next week.

Never was there so quiet an election day in town as yesterday. The new law prohibits the sale of liquor on election day, and all the decent liquor shops were shut up in consequence. We seldom see so few drunken men as put themselves on exhibition yesterday. The City and Brooklyn have gone Democratic by a large majority. Scarcely one of the Union candidates has been elected.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.—The Washington correspondent of the Courier and Enquirer, speculating about Kansas affairs, writes as follows:

"Should they not be removed, the nomination of Governor WALKER and Secretary STANTON will come before the Senate, and will be opposed by JEFFERSON DAVIS, who will lead the assault, by Messrs. TOOMBS, IVERSON, CLAY of Alabama, HUNTER and MASON of Virginia, and Houston of Missouri. What course Mr. DOUGLAS will take is not clear. In this strange concurrence of lately adverse elements, the Republicans will probably coalesce with the moderate and conservative Democrats, and confirm the Governor and Secretary."

It is becoming evident that the confirmation or rejection of Governor WALKER is to be the first political issue in the coming session of Congress. The Southern ultraists have been demanding his recall at the hands of the President; and, failing in this, they now insist upon his rejection by the Senate. Their ground of complaint is the Governor's demand that the new Kansas Constitution shall be submitted to the popular vote, and his rejection of the "simulated and fictitious returns," by which the Pro-Slavery minority hoped to get possession of the Territorial Legislature. We see little risk in predicting that they will find it quite impossible to rally the Democratic Party in the Senate to such a platform. It is possible, however, that they may withdraw enough votes from that party to render Governor WALKER'S confirmation by Democratic votes doubtful. In such a dilemma the Republican Senators, who now number 17, will have virtual control of the result. By voting with the Southern ultraists they can secure the rejection of WALKER. By voting with the Conservative Democrats they can secure his confirmation. If they are governed by exclusively party motives, they will probably take the former course—if by a permanent regard for justice and the peace of the country, they can scarcely fail to take the latter.

The result cannot be a matter of special interest to Governor WALKER himself. Indeed, if his personal views are as ambitious as they are generally supposed to be, he could desire nothing better, as nothing could do him more good, than to be rejected upon such grounds. He has taken a course which will command the approval of the country. If the Democratic Party choose to make war upon him on account of it, it is not difficult to see which must be injured most.

The State Elections.

The election, yesterday, passed off very quietly, and the result, so far as known, is not essentially different from what was anticipated.

In the City the Democrats have carried everything. Their candidate for Secretary of State has a plurality over the Republican candidate of 17,985, and a majority over both of 11,385, with four Wards to hear from, which will increase it still further. They have, of course, elected their whole County and Judicial ticket.

From the State at large our returns are scattering, and not sufficient to warrant any very positive announcement of the result. The aggregate vote will be much less than last year, the Americans losing most and the Democrats least. We are inclined to believe that the Republican State ticket is elected.

Our returns were received at so late an hour that it was impossible to add them up without delay to the morning edition beyond its usual hour of going to press.

The Massachusetts Election has resulted in the complete triumph of the Republican ticket. BANKS will have a large majority, and the Republicans have both branches of the Legislature.

Old Times and New.

The actual pressure on the commercial world, severe as it is, is yet more impressive for the proportions which it has assumed than for any special and unprecedented terrors which belong to its nature, or for any inscrutable mystery which attaches to its origin. This is a fact which everybody is ready to admit in his lucid intervals of relief from the excitements of the hour. But it is greatly to be desired that we should all realize it more constantly, and by reflecting upon it, fit ourselves for the task of reconstructing the fabric of the national prosperity at the earliest possible moment. We ought by this time to have exhausted ourselves in self-condemnation. We have chased our merchants, our banks, our national honor, our commercial system, on every string of the whole of vituperation. What ever Europe may be disposed to say of us, she can say nothing so bad as we have said of ourselves. Possibly we deserve all that we have said. Possibly it may profit us seriously to have fustigated the national conscience with so many and so heavy blows. But it cannot harm us now, or hinder our rapid return to a better mental estate, just to glance at the progress of similar financial disturbances in other times and in other countries. Whatever the faults or shortcomings of the "modern" speculative American commercial system may be it is not to be desired that we should charge that system with "producing" phenomena, which we find to have been generated in very different circumstances and under the operation of a commercial system quite antipodal to our own.

In seeking for instructive parallels to the panic of 1857, we have hitherto confined ourselves to the financial history of our own country, and to events which, however specifically distinguished from each other, nevertheless, agree in one generic origin and in one generic character. The American troubles of 1857 only afford us an antiphonal echo of the American groanings of 1857, and deepen our bitter conviction of present folly by a reduplicated assurance of equal folly in the past.

But the commercial catastrophes of England yield us a more comfortable light. They, at least, were the crises of a constitution radically unlike our own. Yet, we doubt whether any man has yet given so minutely accurate a diagnosis of the commercial disease of New-York in the present year as is afforded in the following report of the British "panic" of 1825, which we extract from the Annual Register for that year:

"The termination of this year differed greatly from the opening.

The public securities early showed a tendency to fall, and the shares of the different Joint Stock Companies had declined from the extravagant prices which they had attained. After the close of the session the state of the money market became still more critical, and almost every species of property fell in price. The large sums which had been invested in foreign loans and in distant or fantastic speculations brought back no return; capital obtained upon credit had been forced into every branch of commerce, and pushed far beyond the limits of immediate demand; the imports of cotton, wine, silk, &c., increased so suddenly and so far beyond their usual amount, that the rates of Exchange began to turn against the country, and the Bank of England diminished its discounts and its issues. In the meantime the demand for further funds to supply the place of those which had been invested in a mode altogether unavailable, for present purposes at least, became gradually more urgent; but in proportion as it grew pressing, suspicion began to arise, and commercial confidence to be shaken. The merchants looked to their bankers, but bankers had been induced by the abundance of money and the low rate of interest, in the end of 1824 and the beginning of the present year, to lay out their funds in discounting bills of unusually long dates, and upon other securities, which could not be realised quickly. They therefore were unable to lend the help that was wanted, and several important commercial failures took place. Soon the distress reached the bankers themselves. Some considerable banking-houses in the country stopped payment; apprehensions sprang up with respect to the stability of the London bankers, and all classes of persons hastened to draw out their balances. This naturally produced one or two failures, and these failures redoubled the alarm. In the beginning of December these embarrassments were at their height, and for some days the agitation in the city exceeded anything that had been witnessed for many years. Lombard-street was nearly filled with persons hastening to draw from their bankers, or waiting in the anxious fear of hearing of new failures. The shock given to Pentlands, the stoppage of the banking-house of Sir Peter Pole & Co., Dec. 5, was tremendous, as it was known that they kept account with forty-four country banks. The funds immediately fell; banking-house after banking-house gave way. The reaction upon the country banks was necessarily great. All the usual channels of trade and credit were stopped, and the circulation of the country completely deranged. On Dec. 16 Government came to the rescue; the Bank of England was authorized to issue one and two pound notes for country circulation, and gold poured from the Mint at the rate of £150,000 per day for one week. And in London and elsewhere meetings were held, adopting resolutions to support the commercial credit, which had, undoubtedly, considerable effect in checking the course of the panic, and restoring some degree of public confidence."

Substitute "railway property" for joint-stock institutions;" the "Banks of Philadelphia and Baltimore" for the "considerable banking-houses in the country," and Wall-street for Lombard, and we have here, almost step for step of the progress of disasters in the commercial metropolis of America, from the crash of the Ohio Life and Trust down to the general suspension. The resemblance dies away, however, unluckily just where we could wish it to be most striking. Our national authorities, through the Sub-Treasury, came to our relief, as did those of England through the Mint, and our banks were, after some difficulty, brought to the point of assisting the circulation by authenticating the country currency; but the "resolutions supporting credit" are yet to be passed, unless we accept as such, the respectable, but rather spasmodic, proceedings of the Boston merchants. Without wasting idle time, however, over past defalcations of the spirit proper to a rich, intelligent and enterprising community, let us learn from the example of the England of 1825 that we are neither the most reckless wretches that ever existed, nor absolutely plunged into the sloughs of irremediable despond.

The Woodman Case.

The public can hardly have forgotten a very extraordinary story of sin and shame, which was not long since published to the world by the Courrier des Etats-Unis as an authentic account of the relations subsisting between a young man of this City and a married lady of New-Orleans, relations which, as it was alleged, had been established in Paris under conditions of the most reprehensible frivolity, to culminate in New-York under conditions of the most revolting baseness and crime.

This narrative, which struck us at the time as almost too disgusting to be credible, has been suddenly revived and brought under renewed doubts by certain legal proceedings now pending before the Supreme Court of this City. And as the whole case thus subjected to the public scrutiny, and surrendered to the ardor of scandalous curiosity, throws a painful and vivid light, as well upon the secret disorders of our social system as upon the flagrant imperfections of our public service, we do not hesitate to invite the grave attention of our readers to certain points of this most deplorable history.

The outline of the facts in this affair, so far as they can be said to be fairly established, is common-place enough. It is the old story of a heedless and neglectful husband, of a thoughtless and vicious wife, and of a third person who avails himself of all the husband's faults or follies to induce the alienation of the wife into a fault. There is a [illegible] tion kept up through several years, in what way and with what motives may perhaps be still considered a matter of legitimate doubt, and a final explosion, resulting in a senseless and headlong exposure, in an ineffectual firing of pistols, a conspicuous uproar in a conspicuous hotel, and a subsequent disappearance of all the parties concerned. In all this there is much to sadden, but nothing to startle the observer of mankind. It is idle to affect amazement at facts which dash the dreams of the Utopian reformer, and grieve the heart of the practical philanthropist, in the police reports of every journal in the world and of every day in the year. But when the first excitement of this affair, which had borrowed an adventitious prominence as well from the locality in which the catastrophe occurred, as from the "social position" of the persons involved, had begun to die away, the public were aroused by extraordinary revelations of such a systematic course of meanness, villainy and oppression pursued by the seducer towards his victim as threw the imaginary devilries of a Henri de Marsay quite into the shade, and almost redeemed, by the contrast, the names of a Richelieu and a Rochester from the special infamy to which they have been so justly consigned.

It was difficult, as we have said, to believe that any man could have descended to such practices as those which were charged upon the vulgar Lovelace of this abominable story. It was still more difficult to understand why the husband, cognizant of such atrocities, should have permitted the perpetrator to escape unpunished. But the matter was odious in every aspect, and as it appeared to the world merely in the form of rumors and of report, it was willingly dropped by all good citizens.

It was not, however, so to be disposed of. On Friday, of last week, an argument was begun before Judge ROOSEVELT, of the Supreme Court, in this City, upon a writ of habeas corpus, issued at the instance of Mr. GARDNER FURNESS, for the purpose of effecting the liberation of Mrs. CAROLINE WOODMAN from the restraint which it was averred had been illegally put upon her liberty by one ALLAN MACDONALD, keeper of a private mad-house at Flushing, Long Island, and at the request of her husband. That argument has not yet been concluded, and having been conducted in a manner of which we wish that we could say it is unprecedented in the history of judicial proceedings in New-York, by Mr. BURTRED, as counsel for Mr. FURNESS, and by Mr. BRADY, claiming to represent the absent husband of Mrs. WOODMAN, it has gradually become a centre of attraction for all the vagrant curiosity of the community.

The case has not yet been closed, and of course we cannot comment with freedom upon the various points which it presents for the consideration of the public. So far the insanity of Mrs. WOODMAN seems to be rather a moral than a mental affliction, and appears to have been made the pretext for placing her beyond the reach of one of those leprous creatures who exist only as the pests and nuisances of human society. There is no reason to suppose that there was any worse motive for her seclusion than this desire to preserve her from the further pollution of her presence until she could be restored to the care of her parents. The special object of his application for a writ of habeas corpus is evident enough. He expects by this open exposure of her shame to compel Mrs. WOODMAN to accept his "protection," by making life intolerable and impossible to her in any other estate.

We abstain, for the present, from all comment upon the leading features of the case as it is presented in Court, the conduct of counsel, the action of the Bench, and the entire defeat and perversion of the writ of habeas corpus from its original and legitimate purpose. One fact revealed, however, seems to call for special remark. It seems to be established that we have among us private Bastilles scattered over the country, disguised as lunatic asylums, into which private persons may be thrust for safe keeping, at the discretion or caprice of friends. We have nothing to say in regard to the particular person who presides over the particular "Asylum" at Flushing, upon which attention has been just now drawn. He may, for aught that has yet been shown, be a Howard for tenderness of heart, and a Wilberforce for pious elevation of soul, and his prisoner may be as truly insane as she is truly miserable. But the theory and the practice alike of our society utterly forbid the maintenance of such establishments as that which he administers. The State has made provision for all lunatics, as wisely foreseeing, and thoughtfully guarding against, the terrible temptations to unnatural crimes which lurk in the leaving to private judgment of any effectual decision upon the mental competency of men and women. And if private hospitals for the reception of private patients are to be suffered to exist, they must be rigorously brought under the vigilant and continual supervision of the authorities of the Commonwealth.

Wholesale Repudiation.

The New-York correspondent of the London Daily News, under date of Oct. 6, writes to that paper a most terrific letter in relation to our "financial flurry," which might probably do more harm across the water if the unreliableness of the writer were not so apparent. But, as the Arrowsmith hoax was implicitly believed even by such cool-headed and sagacious people as the managers of the London Times, we fear there are a good many people who will know no better than to believe the wild trumpery of the News' correspondent. He says, in the letter referred to:

"We owe England a thousand million dollars to-day, and if England thinks to irritate and inflame and enrage her greatest creditor, let the London Times play that game a little longer, and present the bill. America is a young nation, and like a young man she is not to be insulted when all the fervent fires of manhood are in her veins; the young giant may lose blood, but the strength of enduring life is in him, and if England don't want the money we owe her we will keep it for our own use."

England need be under no apprehensions that "We" can be induced to repudiate any part of our debt to her by any possible game that the London Times may choose to play. We are not quite so irritable as the correspondent of the News represents us, and our irritability has never yet let us into any acts of repudiation. Let the London Times by all means keep up its piquant style. We should be exceedingly mortified if the "leading journal" were to become dull and prosy through any apprehensions that its thunder should irritate us to that degree that we would refuse to pay our honest debts. It would be a rather amusing proceeding to be sure if some of our importers of Sheffield cutlery or Manchester calicos should attempt to cancel their obligations to their English creditors by sending over to them a jeering leader from the London Times. But the present generation will not live to witness such a practical piece of pleasantry as this. The correspondent of the News is as much out in his facts as he is in his fancies. The entire indebtedness of this country to Great Britain according to the most reliable British authorities does not exceed eighty millions of pounds sterling, which is very far from a thousand million dollars. There is an expression in the letter of the News' correspondent which leads us to believe that it must have been written in London by some person not very familiar with American affairs. He says: "The United States Banks, which dictate financial law to the Union, are on all hands believed to be sound." What can be meant by this mysterious remark we cannot conjecture, and we imagine that the writer himself would be greatly puzzled to give a satisfactory explanation.

PUBLIC LIFE ABROAD.—The following letter written by the celebrated Eastern traveler, Mr. LAYARD, to a personal friend, is published in the English papers:

No. 120, PICCADILLY, Oct. 17, 1857.

MY DEAR MACKAY: I am off for India next week. My object—to visit the seat of the rebellion, to form my own views upon its cause and results. I have been too long idle, and want again work, and try to be useful. I trust that my journey may enable me to do some good. I wish I had some pleasant, intelligent man like yourself as a companion. I hope to be back by the end of May or early in June. Six months' hard work will enable me to see and do much. If any constituency will do me the honor of returning me during my absence, I shall be happy to serve them. Yours sincerely, A. W. LAYARD.

As the Times remarks, this letter "shows the stuff Mr. LAYARD is made of." It also exhibits one phase of English public life. Mr. L. desiring an election to the House of Commons, starts by qualifying himself to discharge his duties, leaving the constituencies, if they desire his services as their representative, to elect him. In this country any man desirous of a nomination to Congress, who should start off upon a journey to acquire information needed in that post, would be voted insane. He must stay at home and "work the wires." Primary meetings, nominating conventions, and the rest of the partisan machinery of the day, require his attention first;—knowledge and fitness for the place, are matters for after consideration, if they are to be considered at all.

Pretty Explicit.

The Albany Argus publishes the following telegram, sent by the President of the United States to Hon. D. E. SICKLES at Albany, in reference to the rumor that the action of the Governor and Secretary of Kansas was repudiated by the Administration:

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 2, 1857.

To Hon. D. E. SICKLES: There is not a word of truth in the removal of WALKER and STANTON.

A NEW COMEDY.—A comedy, never before performed on any stage, and attributed to Messrs. GOODRICH and WARDER, is in preparation at Wallack's, and will be produced at that establishment during the current month. It is entitled "Romance After Marriage; or, The Maiden Wife."

[illegible]

GEORGE J. COURSEN, Esq., died in this City on Sunday, at the age of 37, after an illness of several months. He was well known to very many of our citizens from his active participation in public affairs, which had almost wholly ceased, however, for the last two or three years. He was a member of the State Assembly in 1847, and was the Whig candidate for Lieutenant Governor in 1853, on the ticket with Gov. HUNT. He was a man of clear, strong intellect, earnest temperament and warm feelings. He has been in feeble health for two or three years, and has made two voyages to Europe and one to South America, but without any permanent benefit. He was a lawyer, and as a man widely esteemed for his social qualities.

New Music.

The "Guitar at Home" is the name of a new manual just issued by HALL & SON. The guitar and its exaggeration, the banjo, are national instruments, and are extensively cultivated. They are simple enough, and well calculated for the home circle of a musical family. The present work is excellent. It teaches all that the majority of players wish to know, and is particularly lucid on the subject of accompaniments. A few months' study of such a manual will enable any player to support the voice in an agreeable and musicianlike manner. There is a large collection of the best vocal pieces; indeed the mere music in the book is worth ten times the price charged for it. We recommend the "Guitar at Home" as the best and most practical work of its kind.

From the same publishers we have received the "Chant du Soldat" and the "Valse Poetique," by Mr. GOTTSCHALK. They are the latest publications of this popular author, and are known to our readers by his performance of them last season. Mr. GOTTSCHALK has made many additions to the Chant, and it is now a highly effective and characteristic piece. The "Valse" is Mr. GOTTSCHALK'S best production. It evidences more care than we usually look for in his compositions, and is full of sentiment and poetry. Both publications will add to Mr. GOTTSCHALK'S reputation, and both may be profitably studied as expositions of musical individuality of a very high order.

Musical.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—VERDI'S opera of "Rigoletto" will be played here to-night, for the first time in four years. Mlle. FERRONI, Mme. STRAKOSCH, Mr. BIGNARDI, (the new tenor, his first appearance,) Mr. TAITANELLI and others, are in the cast.

THALBERG AND VIEUXTEMPS.—These great artists give another of their prodigal entertainments to-morrow-night, at Niblo's Saloon. All the artists of the Academy (including the new tenor) assist in the vocal department.

CASE OF THE BARK DAVID NICHOLS.—The loss of the captain, mate, and two seamen, belonging to the bark David Nichols, of Searsport, Me., and the arrival of the vessel at St. Augustine, on the 16th ult., in charge of the second mate, cook, and one sailor, has already been announced. Although not an impossible event, the story as related by the second mate is a rather improbable one, and should be thoroughly investigated. It is rather unlikely that Captain BERRY would have been harpooning dolphins at 8 o'clock at night, when it must have been dark; but if he did fall overboard in the act of doing so, as asserted by the second mate, it is not at all likely that the mate at that time would have left the ship in charge of the second mate, and gone in search of him. On the contrary, he would have sent the second mate upon that duty, and kept the vessel hove to meantime under his own charge. Again, the vessel was only twenty-five miles from the land at the time of the occurrence, which a boat could have reached in four or five hours, and the mate must have known his position and how to steer by the stars to reach it. It was also in the track of vessels bound northward, and yet nothing is heard from the boat. A pilot's boat also searched in vain for the missing men, the next day. The second mate, as he calls himself, could not tell whether he was north or south of St. Augustine when the captain was lost. The vessel was in ballast from Matanzas, bound to St. Mary's, Ga.

THE COOPER INSTITUTE.—The Peter Cooper Institute is entirely inclosed, and it is expected that it will be ready for occupation in the early Spring. Most of our readers are familiar with its external appearance,—a towering edifice of Romanesque architecture, built of brown stone, with four fronts, on Third-avenue, Seventh-street, Fourth-avenue and Astor-place, respectively. Its base line measures on Fourth-avenue 195 feet, and on Astor-place 165 feet; its height from the sidewalk to the cornice is 90 feet. The large hall in the basement of the building 190x90 feet in dimensions, and will seat comfortably—when the iron chairs, with cushioned backs and seats, similar to those at the Academy of Music, which are now being manufactured for it, are in their places—3,000 people. This huge chamber extends under the sidewalk, which forms a portion of its roof, and through which, by means of glass lights, it will receive its supply of light from heaven during the day. In the night time, gas blazing forth from numerous chandeliers will supply the place of sunshine. There are two lecture-rooms in the third story, each intended to accommodate 1,000 persons. The seats in these two apartments are those which formerly belonged to the old Brick Church and to the Broadway Tabernacle. There will be stores on the first story, offices on the second, and in the fourth the Museum hall, 134x83 feet in dimensions. The 4th story will be used as a picture gallery. The work upon the building is at present progressing slowly.

CENTRAL PARK COMMISSIONERS.—The Commissioners met yesterday at 7 o'clock. The Treasurer was directed to pay the regular employees on the first of each month. The Superintendent was authorized to solicit proposals for trees and plants, to be delivered in the Central Park, not to exceed $2,500. The Committee on Trees and Plants were authorized to hire four yoke of oxen, and to buy three plows. The Chief Engineer was authorized to engage the services of the Engineering Corps of the 4th division of the Park to assist in finishing the work on the 3d division at the same rate as previously ordered by the Board. A communication was received from Prof. JUPITER. All the shanties on the Park grounds are to be sold. The Board adjourned to Tuesday, 17th inst.

☞ Comparatively few of the cartmen renewed their licenses on Saturday, the last day upon which they could do so, except upon payment of an additional fee of $2 50. The applications for renewal were fewer by fifteen hundred this year than they were last. There were, up to Saturday, 5,810 licensed cartmen in New-York. Whether those who have omitted to take out their renewals were unable to raise the fifty cents which they are required to pay for it on whether business was so bad that they thought they would never be able to earn the fee back again, does not appear. Probably both considerations had some weight with them.

NEW-YORK HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—The inauguration of the new and handsome fire-proof building, erected by the Historical Society on Second-avenue and Tenth-street, was celebrated last night with appropriate and prolonged speeches. Addresses were made by the President, Hon. LUTHER BRADISH, by George Bancroft, Rev. Dr. Adams and Rev. Dr. Bethune. Mr. De Peyster submitted the report of the Trustees of the Building Fund, which exhibited the gratifying fact that a surplus remained, after defraying the expenses involved in the purchase of the ground and completion of the building. The audience was very large. Seated on the platform we observed Rev. Dr. De Witt, (by whom the opening prayer was offered,) Dr. Robinson, Rev. Dr. Osgood, Rev. Dr. Bethune, Rev. Dr. Van Pelt, Rev. Dr. Adams, Dr. Francis, Hon. Geo. Bancroft, Mr. Chauncey, President King and Colonel Warner.

If the structure finish it may be necessary to state that it has been in process of erection about three years. The work has moved slowly, but the trustees have the satisfaction of knowing that it is all paid for, which is a cheering reflection in these tight times. The cost of the ground and building is $98,000. The building is solid and substantial, but has a light and graceful look, as best becomes an institution where sound historical learning and the amenities of art are fostered together. It is 80 feet by 92 feet, about 60 feet high, and built of a dark drab-colored stone, brought from Portsmouth, New-Brunswick, the first of the kind ever introduced into this City. On the first floor is the lecture-room, which is a noble hall, some fifty by sixty-five feet, and capable of containing six hundred persons. At the left of the President's platform is a retiring-room, and at the right an ante-chamber, with an entrance on Eleventh-street. Ascending a broad iron staircase, we come to the Library and Art Gallery, which occupy the re-congregation in the Presbyterian Church (colored) in Prince-street, formerly under the care of the Rev. Dr. FINNEGAN, for the purpose of the installation of the Rev. HENRY HEIGHTON GARRETT as their future pastor. There was a tolerably full attendance, the audience being nearly equally divided, being the colored and white varieties of our race. The Rev. Geo. L. PRENTISS, D. D., of the Mercer-street Church, delivered an excellent sermon on the nature of the union between the Redeemer and Christian believers, and on the necessity of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. Rev. Dr. HASTINGS, of the Presbyterian Church, delivered the charge to the new pastor. It formed an extemporaneous address, marked by great directness of purpose, ability and feeling. Rev. Dr. Asa Burns gave the charge to the people, embracing the usual hortatory topics. The meeting was prolonged to 6½ o'clock, and the addresses were heard with great attention.

NAVAL.—The United States sloop-of-war Vincennes was ordered to go into commission yesterday. She will sail for the Coast of Africa this week or ten days. Letters intended for persons in the African squadron must be left at the Navy Department. The Cyane, at Norfolk, is to go out of commission in a few days. The Saranac is more seriously injured than was at first supposed, and will probably go into the Dry Dock.

ELECTION FRAUDS IN MINNESOTA.—It does not yet clearly appear whether Mr. RAMSEY or Mr. SHERMAN is the new Governor of Minnesota. Our latest accounts claim a Republican victory and the election of Mr. RAMSEY. The returns, however, come in with wretched slowness, as election news usually does; it is the same with Minnesota as with Ohio and Iowa, the returns from which are very laughingly arranged. The election in Minnesota, moreover, seems to have been attended by fraud as great as in Kansas. The new Constitution permits civilized Indians to vote, and it is claimed that, under cover of this provision, the Indian Agencies have succeeded in obtaining every Indian vote in the Territory for the Democratic ticket. The Minneapolis Independent states that in "one precinct in that county, seventy-five Indians in breech cloths, blankets, leggings, and painted, came to the polls and voted, and an interpreter called off their names when they deposited their votes."

The Minnesota papers state that the "Indians were plied with whisky by Government officials and others on the day of election, and not to vote the Democratic ticket; returns were openly manufactured, and, finally, Pembina County, with a voting population of less than 100, has brought in one hundred Democratic majority."

St. Paul papers of Saturday, Nov. 3, say it is safe to announce RAMSEY'S election by about 600 majority. McMILLAN (Republican) is said to be elected Judge by 300 majority. The Legislature, at last accounts, stood 65 Democrats to 62 Republicans—a Democratic majority of 3 only, on joint ballot. The seats of two members will be contested on the ground of fraudulent voting.

The Times Building.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Nov. 2, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

DEAR SIR: In your issue of Thursday last it contained a paragraph, stating that the library of the Historical Society has been constructed, as well as the new building for the Times, of Portsmouth stone. You will confer an obligation by a correction of this statement, inasmuch as the Times building is of Dorchester stone from our quarries in New-Brunswick. As the Dorchester stone is, comparatively speaking, a novelty, as well as a specialty in our metropolitan architecture, we desire the public to ascertain its superiority in color and texture over other building material, by reference to the Times building, and we solicit the correction of your error more particularly as the proprietors of the adjacent structure have adopted an opportune contrast by employing the brown free-stone, heretofore popularly esteemed by our citizens. Respectfully, yours,

THOMAS PICTON, Secretary Dorchester Manufacturing Company.

☞ In connection with the Mrs. Woodman scandal case, the Post publishes the following from the Personal column of the Herald, of Oct. 24, which seems to be the reply of FURNESS to Mrs. WOODMAN'S letters:

"MADELINE.—I did answer your two letters; I will be in the main street, in a carriage, on Monday, 26th, and Tuesday, 27th, from 12 until 1 o'clock. Meet me prepared."

☞ THANKSGIVING DAY.—Eleven States unite in the appointment of Thursday, Nov. 26, as a day of Thanksgiving. They are: New-York, New-Hampshire, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Iowa, Maryland, North Carolina, Michigan and Mississippi. Maine is a week earlier, Thursday, Nov. 19.

☞ The new building of St. Luke's Hospital, on Fifth-avenue, near Fifty-fourth-street, is nearly completed. It will cost about $300,000. It is intended to accommodate about a thousand patients, and will be ready for them in the Spring.

☞ Hon. GEO. J. COURSEN, formerly Whig candidate for Lieutenant Governor of this State, died in this City at his own residence on Monday. He was but 37 years of age. He had suffered from a long illness for which he visited South America, and had lately returned thence.

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN GOVERNOR WALKER AND CITIZENS OF LAWRENCE.

From the Lawrence Herald of Freedom.

LAWRENCE, Oct. 30, 1857.

To His Excellency Robert J. Walker, Governor Kansas Territory, and Hon. F. P. Stanton, Secretary Kansas Territory:

GENTLEMEN: We, the undersigned, your fellow-citizens, having heard that your just action in rejecting the fraudulent returns from Oxford, in this district, has created great excitement against you, among certain persons now assembled at Lecompton, and that they are threatening violence; desirous of preserving the peace of the Territory, we respectfully invite you to remove to this locality, and we pledge you a hearty welcome, and full protection against the fiends who would crush you, and trample upon the dearest rights of the people of Kansas.

Respectfully yours, J. H. LAREDO, G. W. BROWN, RICHD. REALS,

And 100 other citizens of Lawrence.

LECOMPTON, Oct. 31, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: We have received your communication of this date, inviting us to remove to the city of Lawrence, and offering your protection against personal violence, which you suppose has been threatened by certain persons in Lecompton. It is quite true, gentlemen, that the evening succeeding our reception of the Oxford returns a small number here of fifteen or twenty persons denounced our course in connection with the administration of the affairs of Kansas; but no threats of personal violence were made, as far as we have learned; and we entertain no apprehensions of that character. Even if such threats had been made, we feel, under existing circumstances here, that, therefore, we must decline your invitation to remove to Lawrence, we tender you our sincere thanks for your hospitalities so kindly proffered. We thank you, also, gentlemen, for the approbation you have so kindly expressed of our course in regard to the extraordinary returns (as they are called) from Oxford. From our first inspection of that document, we never doubted or hesitated as to its rejection. But besides the intrinsic evidence on the face of the report, that we deemed it conclusive, by a visit to that precinct, to ascertain the facts which are set forth in our proclamation of the 16th inst. From the period of our entrance into this Territory, it has been our determination, so far as within our power, to enable the people of Kansas, in the true meaning of the Organic Act, to control their own Government; and to this principle we shall continue steadfastly to adhere. Influenced by these considerations, we have rejected the fraudulent and illegal returns from McGee County, as well as those from Oxford. Accept, gentlemen, more sincere assurance of the respectful consideration of your fellow-citizens. R. J. WALKER,

FRED. P. STANTON.

STEALING A HORSE AND WAGON.—Mr. William Cogswell yesterday left his horse and light wagon in front of a store in Broome-street, when two young fellows jumped into the wagon and drove off at a rapid speed. Officer Humphrey, of the Tenth Ward, happened to see them, and started in pursuit. He succeeded in arresting one of them, who gave his name as William Henry; the other, who had escaped, Henry was taken before Justice Bosworth, of Essex Market, and locked up for examination.

Recovery of Slaves under a Writ of Habeas Corpus.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, TUESDAY, NOV. 3.

Three slaves belonging to THE MASTER WITNESS, who escaped from St. Louis to Parkersburgh, Va., were seized here yesterday when on board a steamboat at the wharf, through a writ of habeas corpus issued by Judge Bissonett, and were placed under the charge of Marshal Rosenbrown, by order of the Court. Mr. WITNESS then sued out a habeas corpus before Judge Carson, claiming that the slaves were unlawfully deprived of their liberty, and claiming that they owed service in Virginia, whither he was carrying them when they were arrested, from his hands. The writ was served by the Deputy Sheriff, and the slaves were brought before Judge Carson this afternoon.

CINCINNATI—P. M.

The slave-case trial here has resulted in the delivery of the slaves to their master by Judge Carson, and they have been carried to Kentucky.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM COLONEL BONNEVILLE TO THE SUPERINTENDENT OF INDIAN AFFAIRS.

SANTA FE, New-Mexico, Tuesday, Sept. 22, 1857.

DEAR COLONEL: Returning a few days since from the depôt on the Gila, I met your friend and agent, Dr. Steck. He made much inquiry respecting the Gila country. Would that your views in regard to locating the Apache Indians in Pueblos could be effected on the waters of the Gila. He appeared to know that I should converse with you on the subject; believed any information in relation to this hitherto unknown region would be deeply interesting, and, perhaps some day might be useful in assisting the operations of your superintendency with these people.

We were operating in what you term known as the Gila country for more than four months; had detachments of troops scattered in every direction, bringing in, on their return, sketches of the country and information from my quarter. I established my depôt on the east bank of the Gila River, a beautiful place, about 60 miles from the Mogollon mountains. The valley is about 25 miles by 40, bounded by the Mogollon to the north, the San Vicente to the east, the Buno and Almaque to the south, and to the west by Patos and San Francisco. These mountains inclose one of the most fertile and healthy spots on earth—beautiful to perfection. So much was it the conviction of all who saw it, that our employers, every one, would have resolved to have made it their home, had it been able to have done so.

About 70 men were sent into the Mogollon mountains. He remained in them near twenty days, visited the head waters of the Gila, and described it as a most elevated and tumbled-up region, perfectly worthless, except a limited space on the northwestern slope of the mountain. His maps, made from frequent readings of the compass, I look upon as very correct. Every detachment furnished me with a map of the country traversed. These I have transmitted, with my report, to the department head-quarters, to which I have no doubt the general will readily give you access.

After pursuing the Dépôt valley, the river continues its course south, and enters the cañons of a low range of Lava mountains, connecting the Buno and Almoque mountains. Lost, as it were, for about twenty miles in the cañons, it falls into a large open country, extending from the Buno Mountain on the east to the Almoque on the west. It continues westerly till it meets the Sierneta Jornado; a low range of cañon, from the south, forces the river among the issues and precipices of its northern extremity, when, seeking again its western direction, it flows for from sixty to one hundred miles through a valley about forty miles wide. This valley was remarked by all as most fertile—extensive bottom lands, a rolling country on either side, offering the finest grazing to the very foot of the mountains. This valley, like every other capable of being cultivated, gives evidence of a former people, agricultural in their pursuits, and, no doubt, far more civilized than the present race who desolate it. We find to the north the Almoque and Patos mountains, with a basaltic range of low mountains connecting these with the Penal range. To the west the south span of the Penal mountains—dead as a barrier to all egress. To the south we have the mountain ranges of Trumbull and Graham, and to the east the Sierneta Jornado. Within these boundaries we have a spot large, fertile, healthy, and well-watered by the Gila, bedded in the mountains, distant from all roads and pass-ways, and without a probability of any ever being made through it—a country, as it were, isolated. This appears to me to be the most admirably adapted for the home of the Indian. Here established in his pueblo, his fertile planting-grounds at his door, good water, and healthy climate, his flocks, herds and stock fattening on the mountain slopes, he would be happily situated. The maguey, the favorite food of the Indian, is here found in abundance. I am aware that objections may be urged to assigning such fertile country to the Indian; but this valley, with all its health, its delicious water and rich lands, is not such as I fancy would be desirable for the settlement of our people, who seek the great thoroughfares, and reject what so completely isolates them from the busy world. Here, indeed, man may live and grow fat, and have nothing to disturb the quiet of a whole year; but this is not to sympathy with busy, active, and enterprising American citizens. So that the fact of its great isolation is an additional recommendation to its Indian adaptability, when, under the parental care of his agent, he may easily supply all his wants, with the certainty that his improvement, though slow, will be permanent. To the north of the Gila the country is broken, rising as you go north into high mountains. Small streams rise in those mountains, and, running through the cañons, at times open out into small valleys of the greatest fertility. On the south the country is rolling to the mountains, without tributaries. It is a peculiarity to this, as to all the Gila region, that springs commence in all the mountains, so as to afford abundance of water for all stock purposes, and sometimes even for irrigation; but these springs lose themselves in the loose soil of the valley, and find the river under ground.

I have made a rough sketch of the subject, desiring simply to draw your attention to it, and if it should have the merit of any usefulness I shall be satisfied. The Sierneta Jornado, I omitted to mention, is about one hundred miles due west from Fort Thorn.

I am, Colonel, yours, &c.,

E. L. E. BONNEVILLE,
Colonel United States Army.

Col. James L. Collins, Sup. Indian Affairs, Santa Fe, N. M.

THE NEW-MEXICAN INDIANS.

From the Washington Union.

Intelligence has been received at the Indian Bureau from Indian Agent Steck of a highly-interesting character. A council was held on the 4th of September with the Coyotero Apache Indians at the Apache Agency. These Indians are desirous of securing peace. It will be recollected that they were charged, more than a year ago, with committing depredations upon the settlements of New-Mexico, though the Superintendent, in his annual report, has exonerated them from the charge. At the council, the spokesman of the party, Cuelo Pene, contended that they were unjustly attached in the late campaign. The Americans had always been regarded as their friends, and it was their desire to continue these relations of peace.

In reply to this it was explained to them, that the attack was made on them in consequence of the murder of H. L. Dones, and others, and the loss of cattle through their depredations. This drew from the spokesman admissions which, in Dr. Steck's opinion, leave no doubt of the culpability of some of their men, not only in what was directly charged upon them, but in the killing of some Pueblos and Mexicans at Cubero last November.

A grand council of the Coyotero Apaches had been held immediately after the fight upon the Gila. After three days and three nights spent in consultation, it was unanimously resolved to sue for peace. Accordingly their chief had been deputed to act for them. In return, they agreed to give the United States possession of the contested gold mountain of Copper-mine.

Believing them to be sincere, Agent Steck directed Chief Pene to return to his people, assuring him that no further steps would be taken at present to chastise them, and that they had peace in their own hands. That Chief was also directed to inform the assembled tribe that the United States wanted none of their wood, water, or gold. On the contrary, that peace, and peace only, was wanted, and that, if these depredations were further continued, a stronger force would be sent into their country than that which had just returned.

The New-York Democracy and Governor Walker.

From the Albany Atlas and Argus.

To suppose that Mr. BUCHANAN seriously entertains the thought of removing his Governor and Secretary for such an act is absurd. The story was that there was a Southern pressure upon him to do this. But this also was absurd, for there cannot be much of a "pressure" from the "Southern" or any other point of the compass in favor of fraud and cheating and forgery in election returns. Those who undertake to stand on such an issue, from whatever quarter of the Union they hail, will fail to make much headway in a crusade against the Administration. The people of this country, at the South as readily as at the North, will sustain the President in doing justice, in upholding honesty, enforcing fair-dealing, in guarding the purity of the elective franchise. If Governor WALKER, in rejecting the Oxford return as spurious, even simulated a questionable prerogative, (which we are not prepared to admit,) she even sets to rebuff of honesty and upright dealing, and merits the President for the people will regard it as a grave one, demanding the punishment of reproved. The people of this country have a quick perception and innate appreciation of what is right, and they will stand by the officer, be he President or Governor or of humbler official station, who is bold to act firmly, even at the hazard of the sacrifice of political ends and aims.

ALLEGED FORGERY.—Roswell Hovey, who lives in Brooklyn, was arrested yesterday, charged with having forged the name of J. Grundy as indorser to a check for $250 on the Shoe and Leather Bank, drawn by W. W. Gilman, on which he received the money. A charge has also been preferred against him of having forged a check of Wm. A. Guest, No. 23 Wall-street, for $336, on the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Hartford, Conn. Justice Osborne committed the accused to the Tombs for trial. Hovey asserts his entire innocence.

Mr. LAWRENCE BOSWELL, Milwaukie,
Agent for Herring & Co.'s Patent Safes.

DEAR SIR: The Herring Champion Safe that I purchased of you, was in my store at the time it was burned last March. The heat was so great that it melted off the brass plates and knob on the front of the safe. The door was warped so badly from the heat, that I was obliged to cut it open. But I am happy to say to you, the contents of the safe were preserved in very perfect condition.

[illegible] Oct. 6, 1857.

[illegible] circumstance has given [illegible] and wide-spread [illegible] connection, or supposed [illegible] with the Legislative apportionment. [illegible] the journals published in Kansas and [illegible] Journals, have complained most bitterly of the Governor, if not for some palpable violation on his part, yet for his complicity with the outrage which virtually disfranchised a large portion of the citizens of Kansas.

Now what are the Governor's duties, and what his acts, as connected with this apportionment? This day, had he been born in time, would similarly have been to have taken the census returns and then divided the aggregate numbers by thirteen, to have ascertained the ratio between each particular district that the whole number of votes returned would have declared the result. This constituted the whole duty, so far as the Council is concerned. They were precisely the same with reference to the House, only that in it's case, he was to divide by 39, and declare how many times his divisor was contained in the dividend it was to measure.

But the Governor performed neither of those arduous tasks. And having failed to perform them, he has been so thoroughly abused, that he seems upon himself to have fallen into the idea that he alone was the measure to blame. Certain it is the whole country holds him in some way answerable for what is called "The iniquitous apportionment". Now we assert that the apportionment could not have been more just had it been made by the best mathematician living, for it was simply an arithmetical question, the Governor having no discretionary power whatever.

Now, if the problem has not been properly solved, the officers upon whom the work devolved, the Governor having failed to perform it, should be called to an account. But we have not even heard it charged that they had not done the work assigned them, and done it properly. It may be asked, if this be the case, what has all the "hue and cry" that has been made, been about?

There have been, we believe, two reasons. One has been to damage the Governor; and the other has grown out of the fact that a wrong has been committed. In the first instance, it was not material where the wrong was committed, nor by whom it was committed. It was thought the end sought could as well be reached without any of this trouble, and perhaps easier.

Those who honestly protested against the wrong deed that a wrong could not have been committed without somebody having committed it, and naturally supposed it must have been the Governor.

But let us examine into the matter with a little care, and we shall see in what the wrong consists, and who was guilty of it. "To the law and the testimony."

It will be seen by examining the acts of the Legislature, passed last Winter, that among those acts is one which provided for taking the census of the Territory, and at the same time did actually district the whole Territory. Here the whole iniquity lies, and it is plain who was guilty of it. The apportionment which has arisen with reference to this matter has been in consequence of having failed to discriminate between the districting and the apportionment. The one was as iniquitous as the enemies could make it—the other as just as the best friend could have done, under the circumstances. This act, districting the Territory, was passed July 29, a long time before Gov. W.'s appointment, and some time before Gov. Geary arrived, for it will be seen that Gov. W. is no more to be censured for the bad districting, than any other Judge of the United States. And here is where the whole just cause of complaint lies. We have in future, that charges will be preferred against the guilty, and that no attempt will be made to reduce the Governor to be corrupt by charging him with corruption. We think if the old method of "giving the devil his due" had been adhered to, the Legislature would have received, about the amount of cursing the Governor has, and he would have been treated more in accordance with his position and acts.

VERITAS.

A Cool Proceeding.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I inclose copy of a letter from Peoria, Ill., which I think deserving of immortality. I had at first designed to give you the name of the "counsel," but on second thoughts, have concluded that it might perhaps trouble him, and therefore withhold it. M.

PEORIA, Illinois, Friday, Oct. 23, 1857.

——, New-York City:

GENTLEMAN—I am if counsel for Mr. ——, of late firm of —— & ——, of this city. The partnership has existed, and Mr. —— has retired from the firm. Mr. —— has consulted me, stated his circumstances, in a word, that his liabilities largely exceed his assets, has expressed an earnest desire to take that course which should be best for all his creditors, and at the same time secure for himself, and has requested me, as his counsel, to go on in his behalf. I have made diligent inquiry touching his condition and ability. He cannot pay his debts in full. In the present crisis he has lost more than all the savings of his whole mercantile career. I have advised him that nothing would be more unjust than to rob either his own family, or a portion of his creditors, for the purpose of paying in full another set of creditors more righteous than the rest; that his true course is to continue his business, to make such necessary provision for the protection and support of his family as the law allows, and to propose to pay each creditor alike, a fair proportion of his demand in reasonable time. I have further advised him, that I can protect and defend him in this course. Before submitting any definite proposition, I wish the assent of all the creditors, or at least to know who will compromise, and who will combine. You will address me in reply, the whole business being committed to my charge. I should be glad to see you here in person.

YOURS, &c., ——, of Counsel, &c.

NEW-YORK AND ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY.—PROPOSALS FOR LOAN.—Subscriptions will be received at the office of the New-York and Erie Railroad Company, in the City of New-York, until the first day of November, 1857, for the purchase of $2,000,000 of the Bonds of the Company, redeemable on the first October, 1862, bearing seven per cent. interest, payable semi-annually on the first days of April and October.

They will be sold at par payable as follows:

50 per cent. in cash at the time of subscribing.

40 per cent. in twenty equal instalments of 10 per cent., or in cash, at the option of the purchaser.

These Bonds are guaranteed by a Mortgage on the entire road and its appurtenances, on all the leasehold property of the Company, including the wharves, ferry privileges and tender property of the Long Dock Company of Jersey City, and on the entire equipment of the Company.

The object of the loan is to fund the present floating debt of the Company, and to obtain means to continue the construction of the tunnel, depot, wharves, and other improvements on the Long Dock property. It will only increase the average indebtedness of the Company about $1,000,000. The following is a comparative statement of the past and present financial position of the Company.

Liabilities over Assets	$24,306,911	$23,365,845	$23,376,816

That the expenditures of the Long Dock Company are judicious, and sure to prove profitable to the New-York and Erie Railroad Company, no one can doubt who will examine the subject. The New-York and Erie Railroad Company have a lease (with the right to purchase at the end of the first year, after six years) of the entire property of the Long Dock Company, consisting of over 2,500 lots of ground, exclusive of the streets opened or to be opened, with ferry privileges, ferry slips and wharves now in construction. The wharves will offer 1,140 linear feet of berth room. Vessels drawing over 22 feet of water will receive the heavy products of the West directly from the cars, or from warehouses into which the cars will run and be unloaded in any weather, without danger or injury to property. The facilities and economy which this will offer to shippers and receivers must largely increase the traffic of the New-York and Erie Railroad Company, and enable it to charge higher rates for transportation than those charged by other routes. The ferries will undoubtedly prove a source of revenue to the Company, whereas at present the ferriage of passengers and merchandise is a heavy tax on the Company.

Any portion of the 2,500 lots not needed by the New-York and Erie Railroad Company can be sold at any time, and by the terms of the lease the proceeds must be applied to the extinguishment or to the creation of a Sinking Fund for the extinguishment of the debt incurred for the improvement of the Long Dock property. The value of this property must be very great whenever the New-York and Erie Company transfer their traffic to the new terminus.

CHARLES MORAN, President.

J. KERNAHAN MARSH, Secretary.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 17, 1857.

LOAN FOR $500,000 FOR THE DEFICIENCY in the Sinking Fund, under Section 3, Article 7, of the Constitution.

To Commissioners of the Canal Fund, by virtue of the act entitled "An act to provide means to support the Government," passed April 12, 1855, and in accordance with Section 3 of Article 7 of the Constitution, hereby give notice, that sealed proposals will be received at the Canal Department until the 10th day of November next, at 12 o'clock noon of that day, for a loan of FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS, for which transferable certificates of stock will be issued in the name of the people of the State of New-York, on the credit of the Sinking Fund, under Section 3, Article 7, of the Constitution, bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, payable quarterly, on the first days of January, April, July, and October, in each year, and the principal reimbursable on the 1st day of October, 1875. It is to be understood that the Commissioners are to be at liberty to take a less sum, if the offers are not such as in their opinion are advantageous to the interest of the State. The proposals may be for the whole or any part of the loan, not less than $5,000. All proposals to be sealed up, and indorsed "Loan for the Sinking Fund," and inclosed in an envelope, directed to the Auditor of the Canal Department, Albany.

The money will be required to be paid, five per cent. on the acceptance of the proposal, and the balance on the 15th day of November next.

Payments to be made by depositing the same to the credit of the "Treasurer of the State on account of the Canal Fund," in the Manhattan Company, New-York, or in the New-York State Bank, in the city of Albany. Interest on the loan will commence on the 16th day of November next, and the holders of the stock residing in the First and Second Judicial Districts, and those residing out of the State, will receive the interest on the Stocks held by them, quarterly, at the Manhattan Company, in the City of New-York; and all other Stockholders at the New-York State Bank, in the city of Albany. Dated, Albany, Oct. 16, 1857.

H. R. SELDEN, Lieut. Governor.
LORENZO BURROWS, Comptroller.
JOEL T. HEADLEY, Sec'y of State.
STEPHEN CLARK, Treasurer.

All these symptoms are allowed to go on, (which this medicine invariably removes,) soon follow fatuity and epileptic fits. Who can say that these excesses are not frequently followed by those direful diseases—Insanity and Consumption?

The records of Insane Asylums, and the melancholy death-bed Confessions, bear simple witness of the truth of this assertion.

THE ELECTIONS.

There was some little rowdyism in the Seventeenth Ward. There were plenty of gangs of boys about the polls, whom the excitement of Election day appeared to stimulate to deeds of mischief. These worthies, some of them pretty large ones, occasioned considerable trouble to the shop-keepers in some parts of the Seventeenth Ward. At about 10 o'clock a large crowd, of them, led on by four men, in ragged raiment clad, carrying a calf upon their shoulders, marched in procession up Avenue B to Tenth-street. There were a number of policemen standing on the corner of Avenue B and Eleventh-street, in whose honor the crowd enunciated a series of hoots and yells in passing. The Police did not notice them. They then commenced an onslaught upon a baker's wagon, which was standing near by, and helped themselves freely to bread. The efforts of the man in charge of the wagon to escape from them were unavailing; stones and bricks and other missiles were thrown at him and his horses when he attempted to drive off. Such a scrambling as ensued for the loaves, to which the little urchins helped themselves freely, will only be equalled by the voracity of those who seek loaves and fishes from the successful candidates after the election. The object of the crowd seemed to be merely the gratification of a malicious propensity for injuring somebody. They marched about through Mackerelville destroying every thing which came in their way. Most of the shopkeepers in that village closed their places of business. At the Twelfth District Poll a crowd of reflected upon the Republican and American boxes at about 10 o'clock. It was stated that PAT MULLIGAN was their leader. They did no further damage. A fight between a gang of rowdies called the "Forty Thieves," and another which rejoiced in the appellation of the "First-avenue Regulators," created some excitement about Tompkins-square, where it took place at noon. The "Regulators" drove the "Thieves" out of the Square. A good many stones were thrown, but little damage done. Urchins in the crowd tore down a portion of the fence surrounding Tompkins-square, and carried off the wood. A posse of policemen, headed by Sergeant McKELVIN, of the Seventeenth Ward, dispersed the crowd. The Police seized some of the saws and other utensils which the rowdies used in demolishing the fence.

THE NIGHT IN TAMMANY.

As of yore (when any hope of a successful result is anticipated) the Democracy met in the Old Wigwam to hear the returns and such remarks upon them as the speaking members should be inclined to make and listen to songs from the Wandering Minstrel, KNEEGAN. At an early hour the "ball supper room," of Tammany was thronged by Democrats eager to learn the general features of the result. When the room became crowded, Hon. M. A. HAYT arose and said: In view of the great triumph which we are advised the Democratic Party has achieved this day in the City of New-York, it would be inappropriate that we should give vent to our feelings in joyousness in so small a room. With the due appreciation of our [illegible] of the hotel, has al- [illegible] for many years the Tammany [illegible] to meet, and to celebrate the success of their men after the day of election. It only remains for me to say that the doors are open and the wigwam is free to all.

As soon as this announcement had been made there was a rush to the principal hall of Tammany, and it was soon filled to overflowing. Hon. JOHN COCHRANE was unanimously elected Chairman for the evening, and his election was followed by three hearty cheers. On assuming the duties, he said:

GENTLEMEN: You have assembled to hear the news of our triumph, which is complete. As the reports come in they will be read to you, and I am sure the news you now have of the result will not be changed by more votes. As I have said, the returns will be read as they come in, and during the intervals you will have the pleasure of listening to such speeches as [illegible] may feel inclined to make, such songs [illegible]

This speech was responded to by cries of "KNEEGAN, KNEEGAN." The inevitable KNEEGAN appeared, and treated the company to the "Liberty Tree," which was received with cheers.

While Mr. KNEEGAN was singing, some returns had been received, and, as soon as he had concluded, Mr. COCHRANE announced that the Tenth Ward had given a Democratic majority over all of 529—over any single party of 1,006. In addition, he asked, when the Tenth so speaketh, what shall we hear of the entire City? We then read that the Second District in the Eighth Ward had given 147, and another 276 majority. A portion of the Third Ward had given for TUCKER 408, for CLAPP 150—and 200 majority over all. These were all the returns that had been received up to that time. Mr. COCHRANE remarked, that from what they had heard of the returns, they would doubtless arrive at the conclusion that the vote was light for all parties, and he believed that the result would show that it was light throughout the State. But he also believed that the aggregate would show that the lightness of the vote lay with the opposition, rather than with the Democracy, the reason being that those who generally voted with the Republican and American parties had suffered most seriously by the recent panic, and that, having arrived at the conclusion that the principles they had supported were not those from which relief was to be anticipated, they had either been careless of the result or had cast their votes for the Democratic nominees. They had undoubtedly arrived at a conclusion which the Democracy had long known to be a fact, that the principles and practice of the Republican and American leaders were enough to ruin any country. For these reasons they would find the vote of their opponents extremely light. But, at the same time, they had no reason to expect that their own returns in the City would prove as heavy as during the Presidential election. The reason was, that the leaders of the Democratic Party in the City, and the people themselves who were of the Democratic Party, had taken it for granted that a triumph was sure, and consequently had not exerted themselves with their usual energy and effect. During the Presidential canvass every Democrat felt that his vote was necessary to the safety of the Union. He felt that there was danger if he were supine, and he was found at the poll. On the present occasion, although principles at stake were as important to the success of the State, the feeling that a triumph was sure had made them somewhat lax in the performance of their duties. This was a mistake. The interests at stake on the present election were of more vital importance to the people of New-York than on any other occasion. It was not, shall the Union be preserved—that was safe; but it was, should they themselves be protected in the rights that were dearest to them, or should they consent to their being taken away—the issue was, whether the money which the laborer receives for his services at night should be good for his groceries in the morning. He would repeat, as the question would be often asked why, in view of those circumstances, is our vote in the City, on this occasion, less than on the Presidential election? He would answer it by reminding them of the course of strong, brave boys at school—who, when dared to fight by a lad of inferior strength, made up the odds by proposing to fight with one hand tied behind him. This was what the Democracy had done to-day. They had tied one hand behind them, taken the Republicans and Know-Nothings by the collar, and licked them both. And yet, under all the circumstances, if they had 10,000 majority in the City, it would be a greater Democratic triumph than the 25,000 plurality of the Presidential election. What the result might be in the State, he was not in a position to tell; the State was in the hands of the Republican Party, and the majority of last year was a large one to overcome in a single effort. There had been, for a number of years, a striking difference of opinion between the people of the State and the people of the City. The people of the State (the Republican and Know-Nothing portion of it) had been in the habit of considering the City as a sort of Egypt—or as in Egyptian darkness. They had said the State would be all right if it were not for the City—that always troubled them. They of the City had assured them that they were all right; that they would sustain the Union and the Constitution, and that if was the people of the country who wanted Repudiation, &c. &c. He knew that the time had arrived when the City would be able to show them that they were enlightened; that they were ripe. In conclusion he remarked that they would bear weight from the State, and he believed that it would turn out on this occasion to have been as bright and lively as the City.

HAYT, a gentleman in the audience, whose name was subsequently ascertained to be FRANCO, wished to know whether Judge PARSONS was anybody? He had prostituted his office, and he believed him unfit to occupy a seat as Judge of the Supreme Court.

Returns from various wards were received from the first and third districts of the Seventeenth Ward, which Mr. COCHRANE said had been before Know-Nothing, but now were Democratic. He then stated that the Seventh Ward had given 900 majority for the Democratic ticket over all others.

A VOICE—"How about the bloody Sixth?"

Mr. COCHRANE, in answer—"Its all Democratic." I am requested to offer a reward for any genuine Know-Nothing or Republican vote cast to-day in the Sixth Ward. (Cheers.) He then stated that the returns from the First Ward showed a majority of eight hundred in favor of the Democratic ticket. At this point Mr. FRANCO, who had, while in the audience, made the inquiry relative to Judge PARSONS, seconded the platform and denounced that gentleman at considerable length. When he had concluded, Mr. COCHRANE announced that the Sixteenth Ward had given RICHARD SCHELL, their candidate for Senator, a majority of 900. He had also a word to say in relation to the Fifteenth Ward. That, they all knew, was the silk-stocking Ward of the City. Formerly, when the weather was fine, when there was no rain nor any dust, the silk stockings used to turn out opposition majorities of from 1,000 to 2,000. If the skies were lowering, or the streets were dusty, they would not cast over 1,000 or 1,200. All they had now was 344 for Fusion, and he had reason to believe that was an exaggeration. The Fourteenth Ward had rolled up a majority of 1,700 for TUCKER.

KNEEGAN—Three cheers for the Fourteenth; which were given.

There were then cries of "A song," "A song." As soon as they had ceased, an inspector from the Fifteenth Ward stated that it had returned a Democratic majority. [Loud cheers for the redeemed Fifteenth.] After which Mr. KNEEGAN came forward with a song. He said he would be obliged to suppose himself HORACE GREELEY for a few moments—he did not know how he could succeed, for he had never tried it, but he must attempt, for he was about to sing the "Republicans' Lament." It was a doleful ditty, ending with the following refrain:

"Oh, dear! our fate is sure,
I and my party must die;
Oh, yes, for soon they'll inscribe on our tomb:
'Here do the Know-Nothings and Woolly-Heads lie.'"

He was followed by ANDREW JACKSON FRANCO, who spoke extensively on general principles and the sure success of the Democracy.

During his speech Alderman CLANCY appeared and stated, amid the cheers of the audience, that the Sixth Ward had given 2,000 majority for the State ticket, and that the majority for the County ticket would exceed that. This was followed by the announcement that the Eighteenth Ward had given a majority for the Democracy of 600 over all.

Mr. FRANCO concluded with a eulogy upon Alderman CLANCY and a strong desire for the success of Democratic principles. When he had concluded, there were loud cries for "CLANCY, CLANCY," but Mr. CLANCY had gone out.

The Eighth Ward was then announced as having given a Democratic majority of 400 over all, and the Thirteenth as having given a majority of 600.

At this point Mr. MICHAEL WARD appeared and was greeted with cheers. He said he was glad to find them so enthusiastic to-night. He wished they had been more so during the day, for the Democratic vote was lighter than it should have been. And yet, he did not know but it was all right after all. It was the custom in the country where he was brought up and where the snow fell three feet deep when it snowed long enough, to let a fellow up after he had been badly beaten, and he thought it had perhaps been too bad to have licked their opponents any worse than they had. He was not much in the humor for making a speech, for he was very tired.

A VOICE—No you ain't. Go ahead.

Marshal RYNDERS—I tell you I am, and I know better than you. I got up this morning at 5 o'clock, because I had heard an intimation that they were going to steal our boxes. I was not alarmed about it, but I thought it was well to be around. And now, under all the circumstances, I think, if we roll up a majority of from 12,000 to 20,000 for the State ticket, in the City, we will do very well. I believe the prospect is very good for the State. I have seen some returns from the country, and think it looks fair; but still we may have been beaten. We might have done better in the City. A man said to me this evening: "You ought to have rolled up 25,000 majority." I told him we could have done it just as well as not, if he had asked for it before; but he had come too late. Their majority reminded him of the story, of the negroes who were set to fight—

A VOICE—Louder.

Marshal RYNDERS—I'm telling a story about two niggers—and I'll tell it as loud as I can. I suppose there are a number of Republicans here, they usually do come to Tammany to hear some fun; they never hear any at their own quarters, because they are always beaten, and I am glad they do come, and I hope they'll stay for I can assure them that we are like an India rubber ball, the harder we are thrown down the higher we will bound. They thought, and the Marshal, they were [illegible] doing so they were assured in defeating the Democracy. But they had failed. Now he would tell his nigger story. In the Fifteenth Ward, they called them negroes or colored brethren—down in Virginia, they called them niggers. Well, there was an old man, and he had a great big stout nigger, and he offered him to fight any other nigger in town. Another nigger was produced, and got awfully pummeled. The old man then offered a little nigger, but it was said that he did not amount to anything, and was not worth counting in. The old man replied, that although he was little he was "some," and if they tried him, they would find him so. So it was with their majority. Although it was little, comparatively, it was a great deal under the circumstances. It also reminded him of a fight he had out on Long Island when he was a boy. He had bet a dollar on the race with a big fellow, who tried to cheat him out of it. He was smaller nearly, but he licked him and the people cried out, "Go in KNEEGAN, go in." [illegible] and he did go in and whipped him—although it was a hard job and he did [illegible] with their majority. It was but small, but they had a hard job in the State under the circumstances, and to win was a triumph. He wished to ask the President how the Eighteenth Ward stood.

KENNEDY—Ah! that's bully.

Mr. COCHRANE read the Democratic majority.

MARSHAL RYNDERS—Well, that beats all. Gentlemen, the Chairman ain't humbugging in he? [Cries of no, no.] Well, I'm glad to hear it. The Republicans and Know-Nothings were married a short time ago, and here it is. Why, it ain't as big as Mrs. CUNNINGHAM's bogus baby. But another word about the rum business: We have beaten them worse without the rum than with it, and I do believe that if at the next election they would shut off not only the rum but the water, there would not be more than 100 of the Republicans and Know-Nothings left in the City. They shut off the lager and the gin. You could not get any gin in the Sixth Ward; but, by the bye, the gin in the Sixth Ward ain't gin—it's Irish whisky, made up in the western part of the State. I have drank it many a time, and I know it is so. You know that, too, CHARLEY. [A VOICE—That's a fact, Marshal RYNDERS.] Then there was the glass ballot-boxes. They were going to make a great change with them. But they were just the thing for the Democracy. When a Democratic ballot went in it could be seen, and there were Democrats enough around to watch that it didn't come out again. We beat them with the glass ballot-boxes, and we can beat them with any boxes. A Democrat can vote in any box [Laughter.] Then there was the police. They were appointed by the Republican Party. He wished to state that he had been over the entire City during the day, and he could state that they had behaved very well. They stood in corners, and were very civil, indeed. They were very prudent, and, therefore, did not get themselves into a great deal of trouble. In the Seventh Ward there was one who made himself rather officious, and a friend of his—a French gentleman from the County Galway—touched him lightly on the nob and he was quiet. He, the Marshal, saw how the thing was done, and as he was buttoned up, and might possibly be mistaken for a policeman, he thought it prudent to move out of the way, for he was satisfied that his French friend might beat a mob over the head with the stick he had a very long time without making him laugh. [Applause.]

At this point more returns were received.

The Fourteenth Ward was announced as having given 1,560 Democratic majority, and the Twelfth Ward 540. After that announcement Marshal RYNDERS retired amid the cheers of the audience.

Judge MORTON was the next speaker. He joined heartily in the cheers for Marshal RYNDERS, and considered that the smallness of the vote would make no serious difference to their country ticket. That, he was sure, had been elected. It had been charged that there was treachery in the camp—that the name of the bold MITCHEL had been struck from the ballots. He did not charge that it was so.

VOICES—It was so.

Judge MORTON—Yes, but it was known yesterday, and MITCHEL will be the next Registrar for the County of New-York. He spoke of the Judiciary and of the other officers, and felt sure that all the Democratic nominees had been elected. He hoped they had carried the State. But even if they had come within twenty or thirty thousand of it, they were in a good position for the next election.

Mr. KNEEGAN then sang his favorite song, entitled "The Democratic Father and Son." Following this, a summary of the returns was read by Mr. COCHRANE, who made some concluding remarks, in which he urged the necessity of making every effort at the December election for the defeat of the opposition, and the present occasion would awaken them for the City election in December.

Mr. KNEEGAN sang a new version of the "Liberty Tree," and after brief remarks from others, the meeting separated.

The other parties (the Republican and American) made no particular demonstration last evening. They had no "head-quarters" open for the reception of returns, and were not congregated in large numbers in any portion of the City.

THE ELECTION IN KINGS COUNTY.

CONFIDENT REPORTS OF THE DEMOCRACY.

The election in Kings County passed off very quietly, and a very small vote was polled. The only occurrence to disturb the monotony of the day was the explosion of a ballot-box early in the morning at the First District polls in the Third Ward, Brooklyn, caused by heat, and a little disturbance at the opening of the polls in the First District of the Second Ward. Here a man named THOMAS MCNAMARA objected to a man named THOMPSON, a Republican, acting as Inspector. He was intoxicated, and after tearing down the American and Republican posters, in the presence of three policemen, who did not interfere, the Deputy Superintendent of Police arrived on the ground and caused the offender to be arrested.

The county has given the Democratic State officers a decided majority. The Democratic local ticket is supposed to be elected in every instance, with the single exception of Gen. HARMANUS DURYEA, in the Third Assembly District, embracing the Fourth and Tenth Wards.

This result was loudly attributed by some Republicans to the action of the Americans, a large number of whom worked against the Union ticket, and either voted for the Democratic candidates or did not vote at all.

The officers supposed to be elected are as follows:

Sheriff—George Rentzen.
Superintendents of the Poor—Barnabas H. Booth, John E. White.
State Senators—Second District—Samuel Sloan. Third District—Francis B. Spinola.
Members of Assembly—First District—John A. Voorhees. Second District—Moses S. Beach. Third District—Harmanus B. Duryea. Fourth District—David M. Chauncey. Fifth District—John A. Dayton. Sixth District—John Hanford. Seventh District—George W. Bleecker.
Justice of Sessions—John A. Emmans.
Coroners—Winant E. Bennett, Cornelius Coulter.

POSTSCRIPT.

WEDNESDAY, 5 O'CLOCK A. M.

ADDITIONAL ELECTION RETURNS.

New-York State.

KINGS COUNTY.

The Republicans and Americans fused on Legislature and county officers, but the Democrats have carried nearly every name on their ticket against the coalition. It is believed that General DURYEA, in the Third Assembly District, is the only Fusionist elected. Last year the Democratic vote in the county was nearly 3,000 below the aggregate of their opponents.

The steamship Arago, from Southampton Wednesday, Oct. 31, arrived at this port to-day with four days' later market accounts, and $330,337 in Gold. The money news is to the effect that the Bank of England had raised the rate of interest to 8 ⅌ cent., the Bank of France to 7½ ⅌ cent., and the Bank of Hamburg to 9½ ⅌ cent., and that after the first effect of the announcement of the English change of rate, the Funds became steady, and left off at 88¾@88⅞ ⅌ cent. The accounts from this side were to the 8th October, by the Canada, steamer, which left Boston on the 7th and Halifax on the 9th. The continued failures among the merchants here, and the embarrassment and low rates of the exchanges, were the principal announcements to the action of the Bank of England. The Discount market was nevertheless fairly supplied with money, and some bills were taken outside, below the Bank minimum. A continued disposition is manifested in London to speculate in the American railways at the reduced quotations, and business is reported in the Illinois Central, New-York Central, Michigan Central and Southern, and New-York and Erie. Although nearly our lowest prices were taken out by the Canada, the operations which followed after her arrival were at relatively much better prices. The impression seems not to have been removed that our money pressure and great depreciation in Stocks were the result of an unmeaning panic, which must soon pass away, to be followed by a quick and decided reaction in confidence and market values. On the other hand, no feeling of alarm is expressed in regard to the prominent English houses connected with the American trade, and the failures which had occurred in Glasgow and other manufacturing districts were of second-rate importance. The resignation of the manager of the Western Bank of Scotland at Glasgow, is mentioned in some of the letters; the cause we understand to be his connection with one or more of the recent failures. At Liverpool the Cotton market was slightly down, ⅛d.; and the market for Breadstuffs quiet.

Our own market for Stocks responded favorably to the English news, after the details were understood, and a rise was established of 1½ ⅌ cent. on three or four of the speculative railways, the whole market leaving off firm. At the outset of the list at the early Board, a disposition was shown to sell the market down, and New-York Central was done as low as 63¾ ⅌ cent.; Reading at 29; Erie at 13; and Toledo at 27½ ⅌ cent. From these prices the reaction was, in Central to 65¾; Erie, 14; Toledo, 30½, and Reading, 30¼—other road shares sympathizing more or less. The bonds of the Illinois Central were done at 72@71@70; Missouris, 68¾; Californias, 60; Eries of 1871, at 29@30, and Virginias, 79.

The Foreign Exchanges closed firm for the Boston mail, 107½@108¾ on London, and Paris 5.40@5.35, with a fair amount of business done on account of the collection of dividends yesterday, and the settlement of mercantile credits since the last packet. The supply of transient bills is light. The export list this week from this port in the way of produce
